PETER DRONKE

Sacred and Profane Thought in the Early Middle Ages

2016, XXXIV-282 pp., with 4 pl. («Strumenti e studi n. s., 41»)
ISBN 978-88-8450-704-4 · HB · € 62,00

In these essays Peter Dronke looks at some of the relations between sacred and profane ideas and images, and Christian and pagan motifs, particularly in the early Middle Ages. The first two parts of the book dwell on aspects of (in the widest sense) Christian Platonism, the one part focussing on themes, the other on some of the greatest thinkers in the Latin world, from Boethius in the sixth century to Thierry of Chartres in the twelfth. The emphasis throughout is on transformations and syncretisms far more than disjunctions. The final group of essays is concerned with poetic texts, Latin and vernacular, in which non-sacred elements make their way into the sacred, the biblical and the saintly realms. A brief Epilogue glances at early medieval profane outside as well as within Europe.

already published in the same series:

PETER DRONKE, Imagination in the Late Pagan and Early Christian World. The First Nine Centuries A.D.

The author explores continuities and interchanges between the pagan and Christian imaginative worlds, and signals some of the heights of creative imagination in the first nine centuries A. D. The book sheds fresh light on the nature of both pagan and Christian Neoplatonism, and on the poetry of the early Middle Ages.

PETER DRONKE, The Spell of Calcidius. Platonic Concepts and Images in the Medieval West

While histories of literature and philosophy have till now presented Calcidius as if he were no more than a secondhand mediator of Platonic thought, Peter Dronke, shows that this judgement must be radically revised. Calcidius' commentary on Plato's Timaeus is a deeply individual work, which was able to inspire a fresh way of looking for truth, of searching for a world-picture that was not ready-made, among exceptional thinkers across eight centuries.
