Preface by Francesco Santi

The Life of Saint Euphrosyne tells the story of a young woman, allegedly in fifth-century Alexandria, who refused both the social conventions of the time and the wealth of her family, and embraced an ascetic life hidden away in a monastery. It was originally written in Greek, perhaps in the sixth century or shortly after, when this sort of text was very popular. Soon translations were made into several languages: Latin, Syriac, Armenian, Arabic, and various medieval vernaculars. At least three Latin translations emerged by the late eighth and early ninth century in Carolingian Francia and northern Italy, respectively. Translation A corresponds to a model in a high stemmatic position. The earliest surviving manuscript was copied around 800, perhaps in Troyes. A later version of the same translation, known as the Life of Saint Castissima, circulated in northern Spain in the tenth century. The earliest extant witness of Translation B was produced in the region of Würzburg, in the late eighth century. Translation C surfaced in the scriptorium of Pacificus of Verona.

This book offers critical editions of the Greek and Latin redactions produced prior to the late twelfth century and a study of their transmission. An appendix presents a different Latin version based on Translation B, copied in a manuscript from Montecassino. The Life of Saint Euphrosyne is a remarkable example of the plasticity and vitality of anonymous hagiographical texts.

PAULO FARMHOUSE ALBERTO is Professor of Medieval Latin at the University of Lisbon. He mainly works on Latin literature of early medieval Spain, and its transmission and reception in the Middle Ages and the humanist Renaissance. Principal areas of interest are seventh-century Visigothic poetry and grammatical texts on metre and prosody, as well as hagiography.

PRESENTAZIONE

L'AGIOGRAFIA MEDIEVALE E LA CONDIZIONE ANONIMA DEI SUOI TESTI NELLO SPECCHIO DI EUFROSINA<sup>1</sup>

Tra le diverse tipologie letterarie sperimentate nel Medioevo latino l'agiografia è forse quella che meglio lo rappresenta. Avvicinare il suo profilo alle forme antiche di biografia è in effetti piuttosto forzato perché il soggetto dell'agiografia non è la vita di una persona ma la rappresentazione di come una persona possa aver vissuto la vita stessa di dio<sup>2</sup>. Questo costituisce la santità per i nostri autori e questo tipo di santità corrisponde a una specifica figura di dio, presupponendo «il dio che si fa uomo perché l'uomo possa farsi dio», secondo l'insegnamento di Ireneo di Lione (Adversus haereses, III.19,1), ripreso da Agostino (Sermo ad populum 344) e dallo stesso Tommaso (Officium de festo corporis Christi, Ad Mat., In I Noct., Lectio 1). Delle molte figure di dio che l'umanità può sperimentare il Medioevo mise alla prova questa, il cui legame intrinseco con la scrittura agiografica è evidente: di qui nasce la convinzione che la persona può essere pienamente perfetta, pienamente libera, pienamente capace di porre le condizioni della sua esistenza e condurle alla loro metà.

L'idea della santità che il racconto agiografico esprime sul piano della storia della società corrisponde al fatto (propriamente medievale) che la dimensione politica e la dimensione religiosa sono considerate due dimensioni diverse, in una consapevolezza progressivamente più forte. La differenza tra le due dimensioni corrisponde infatti al riconoscimento che nell'uomo esiste una realtà che non è accessibile ad alcun potere perché ogni uomo può vivere nella familiarità divina. È evidente che in riferimento a ciò si poteva costruire uno spazio ideologico (lo spazio in cui si stabilisce il potere ecclesiastico come alternativo al potere civile) ma anche è evidente come si costituisca uno spazio spirituale (in cui diventa possibile ogni creatività). L'ambivalenza crea una tensione che certamente si riflette nel racconto agiografico e nelle dinamiche della tipologia letteraria.

Non ci sorprende che proprio nel tipo di scrittura che è più intimo al Medioevo, appunto l'agiografia, la realtà dell'anonimato risulti avere un grande incentivo. Il fatto è subito evidente per l'importanza dei dati quantitativi, facilmente rilevabili nelle banche dati e in particolare nella banca dati OPA, che censisce e opere anonime dal VI al XV secolo<sup>3</sup>. Le ragioni di questa vivacità dell'anepigrafia agiografica sembrano altrettanto evidenti. In primo luogo il protagonista del racconto (il santo) risulta assolutamente più importante dell'autore del testo, che spesso resta così sconosciuto. Favorisce poi l'anonimato la possibilità del riuso dei testi: visto che la ricerca di un significato spirituale prevale sull'esigenza di specificare notizie biografiche, spesso non si mostra interesse a documentare con il testo i dettagli storici degli eventi, quanto piuttosto l'esecuzione di uno schema, il possibile ripetersi di un'esperienza; in questa sussidiarietà degli aspetti propriamente biografici del racconto, poteva dunque verificarsi che non si avvertisse alcuna difficoltà a riutilizzare per un santo il testo che era stato composto per ricordarne un altro; a sua volta il riuso poteva comportare alternativamente ripetizioni o innovazioni, magari rivelate queste ultime da interventi di lieve consistenza capaci però di riformulare il significato del testo senza per altro suscitare l'esigenza di dichiarare il nome di chi avesse preso tale iniziativa autoriale. In terzo luogo il testo agiografico è facilmente disponibile all'anonimato perché esso è sentito come spazio pubblico, nel senso che le esigenze del pubblico e il loro conto (spirituale e liturgico) prevalgono mettendo in movimento la ripetizione, provocando rifacimenti più o meno intensi. Le tre condizioni che stanno all'origine della disponibilità anepigrafa dei testi agiografici (relative ad autore, finalità del testo e pubblico) moltiplicano i loro effetti nella vicenda della trasmissione, floridissima in ragione della sete di agiografia che il Medioevo conobbe e solo molto parzialmente ricostruibile.

Tra essi vorrei ricordare Jeroen Deploige, Anonymat et paternité littéraire dans l'hagiographie des Pays-Bas méridionaux (ca. 920-ca. 1320). Autour du discours sur l'«original» et la «copie» hagiographique au Moyen Âge, in «Scribere sanctorum gesta», recueil d'études d'hagiographie médiévale offert à Guy Philippart, éd. E. Ziolkowski, Firenze 2014, pp. 435-45.

La dimensione ideologica della santità favoriva da parte sua l'anonimato, perché le modalità nelle quali la santità doveva essere rappresentata dovevano corrispondere ed essere congrue con l'azione del potere ecclesiastico, stereotipandosi. Anche la dimensione spirituale della santità poteva però spingere nella stessa direzione: il centro vitale del racconto agiografico, il fatto che la persona potesse compiere gesti di assoluta gratuità, provocava la responsabilità di chi ne scriveva, poneva la sua stessa storia in una dimensione metastorica, interpellando e stringendo l'autore nell'angolo della sua persona, lontano dalle esigenze della notorietà e dell'anagrafe.

La fluidità del testo agiografico, così ricca di diversi significati, è perfettamente documentata in questo libro di Paulo Alberto Farmhouse, che mostra una sensibilità nuova al problema dell'anonimato. In un certo senso è la stessa protagonista che crea questa possibilità: nell'Alessandria del V secolo, Eufrosina mette in gioco la sua identità a vantaggio della sua libertà, fingendosi maschio e mutando il suo nome; in questo modo ella sfugge al matrimonio sgradito rifugiandosi in un monastero e soltanto dopo molti anni potrà rivelarsi di nuovo per quella che è, trovando per altro la comprensione del padre, che ne segue l'esempio ritirandosi in monastero e rinunciando ad ogni altro bene. Lo stesso nome di Eufrosina è instabile anche nella tradizione, chiamandosi la santa nei testi latini a volte Eufrosina e altre volte Castissima. Il testo originario che le venne dedicato, probabilmente nel tardo VI secolo, è un testo greco ma esso stesso dovette conoscere riscritture, diffondendosi nei mondi così diversi del Mediterraneo d'Oriente e d'Occidente, da Costantinopoli all'Italia meridionale. Tutto intorno si diffondono le innumerevoli traduzioni in latino, siriaco, armeno, arabo, slavo antico (per l'alto Medioevo) e poi (nel basso Medioevo) in francese, italiano, portoghese, tedesco, inglese e olandese medio. In nessun punto emerge un nome d'autore, ma noi vediamo innumerevoli autori alla prova della santità, ciascuno con il suo linguaggio, in una ripetizione ostinata che non riesce mai ad essere identica.

Ovviamente per comprendere a pieno la fluorescenza bisogna lavorare con sicurezza su ciascuno dei raggi che in essa si generano; bisogna lavorare con sicurezza sui testi. Paulo Alberto Farmhouse lo fa a proposito dei testi greci e latini fino al secolo XII, suscitando la nostra ammirazione e la nostra gratuitudine, riuscendo a documentare quello che altrimenti rischiava di restare un mero schema astratto. Oltre a dipingere un panorama, che mette in comunicazione e in tensione la Tarda Antichità e il Medioevo, egli con questo libro dà anche uno strumento di lavoro per chi volesse occuparsi degli altri mondi nei quali Eufrosina navigò, ponendo il Medioevo latino in quel contesto multidisciplinare che gli è necessario. I due elementi, la completezza e l'apertura, faranno di questo libro un libro di riferimento per i nostri studi.

Ancora una volta e con più sicurezza ancora rispetto ad altre circostanze, noi constatiamo come l'anonymato sia condizione di pluralità e di creatività. Creatività nelle strategie ideologiche, ma soprattutto – nel nostro interesse – creatività nelle strategie dello spirito umano, sempre alla ricerca di racconti per rendere pensabile l'esperienza della libertà, che in ogni momento sembra possibile e sempre di nuovo sfugge. La santità è il suo rifugio, per il quale l'anonymato non è per niente segno di debolezza.

FOREWORD

The purpose of this book is to explore one of the most fascinating and challenging aspects of late antique and early medieval textual transmission: the fluidity of the anonymous text. This is always a complicated class of texts. But in the case of hagiography, this fluidity, this permanent change of a narrative core into new forms, is even more complex.

First, these are texts frequently intended to be read and transmitted without the author's name, and often seen as a collective narrative to be reworked and reshaped by whoever wishes to do so. At the same time, the hagiographical text, like any other classical, late antique, or medieval text, was subject to the usual constraints and vicissitudes of late antique and medieval textual transmission. In most cases, we are left with crumbs from a long chain of countless operations of copying a copy of a copy over the span of many centuries. Often these texts become difficult to reconstruct from a line of transmission in which most elements are lost.

Finally, the hagiographical text is subject to a number of conditions not experienced by other classes of classical and medieval text: their belonging to the history and development of the cult of a particular saint or saints has certain implications. They are recurrently adapted to the liturgical, or simply spiritual, needs of each audience in a particular time and geographical and cultural context. This entails reshaping the text constantly into different styles and linguistic registers, either to make them more suitable to a sophisticated audience or to make them more accessible to the less learned.

The Life of Euphrosyne is a good example. The text tells the story of a young girl from a wealthy family in fifth-century Alexandria, supposedly in the time of Theodosius II, who turned her back on earthly riches and social conventions, and, disguised as a man, dedicated herself to God in a monastery. Written originally in Greek, possibly in the sixth century, the account underwent many changes in subsequent centuries. It was reworked into different redactions that travelled across the eastern and western Mediterranean, from Constantinople, Macedonia, and the Middle East to the Greek communities in southern Italy. Exemplars of the Greek text were then translated into several of the languages of early medieval Christianity: Latin, Syriac, Armenian, Arabic, Old Slavonic. In Latin, we have at least three different translations, stemming from different lines of transmission of the Greek account. In the Middle Ages, the vita was translated into a number of vernacular languages: French, Italian, Portuguese, German, English (in Aelfric's collection of saints' lives), and Middle Dutch.

One thing is clear: the extraordinary success and dissemination of this narrative owes a great deal to the concept of anonymity in hagiographical literature. Each agent of the transmission can be an author. The textual forms change time after time, century after century, according to the audience and purpose in each moment. But the core of the narrative remains with the same inspiring essence and scope. In two of the main Latin redactions, even the name of the heroine changes, from the Greek Euphrosyne to its Latin equivalent Castissima. But the story remains the same.

The present book deals with a small portion of the life and dissemination of the Life of Euphrosyne: only the extant Greek and Latin versions produced prior to the late twelfth century will be explored. The introductory chapters to each version elucidate their textual history, and the critical editions provide the reader with a sound base for the study of the texts.

The idea for this book was born in Bologna, when in 2021 I was Invited Fellow at the Institute of Advanced Studies (ISA) of the University of Bologna. It was a challenge proposed by Francesco Santi. My first words of gratitude are addressed to him. I would also like to thank so many people who helped me, directly or indirectly, in the completion of this work, but I am afraid I will omit many of them. I'll simply mention some of those who contributed directly to this book. First, Guy Philippart, who provided me with the initial information about the manuscripts containing the different versions of the Vita Euphrosynae, and Monique Goullet, an enthusiastic supporter of my study and a most influential master in écriture and réécriture; my colleagues Fernand Peloux and Renaud Alexandre, with their sound knowledge about many important points in this study; Eftychia Bathrellou and Fotini Hadjittofi, my colleagues at my university, and also Anna Lampadari-dì, who kindly helped me with the Greek text; Annunziata Di Rienzo, who provided me with information about the Syriac translation, and Mariapia Muccigrosso, who likewise enlightened me about the Armenian texts; Guglielmo Cavallo and Mirella Ferrari, with details on certain manuscripts, and François Dolbeau, with details on a biblical passage; Robert Godding and the Société des Bollandistes, for their generosity with bibliography and other material; Laura Albiero about some liturgical terms; Vanni Veronesi for his help with a Gorizia manuscript; Federico de Dominicis for his bibliographical help. To Alwyn Harrison my sincere gratitude for helping me render this book legible. Several other fine scholars will be mentioned at various points. Finally, to the Institute of Advance Studies of the Università di Bologna, the Alma Mater Studiorum, which made it possible to start working on the fascinating and multifaceted Life of Euphrosyne.

INTRODUCTION

I.
THE HAGIOGRAPHICAL DOSSIER
OF EUPHROSYNE OF ALEXANDRIA

According to the late antique narratives, Euphrosyne was a wealthy young woman in fifth-century Alexandria who disguised herself as a man and lived in a monastery for the rest of her life<sup>1</sup>. By this ruse, she escaped her father, who wanted her to marry and to take on the business and wealth of the family. Euphrosyne thus belongs to a well-known gallery of late antique women in the eastern Mediterranean who fought against their parents and marriage, refusing the social conventions of the time in order to choose freely a Christian life of full dedication to God in an ascetic environment<sup>2</sup>.

Many of these heroines achieved immense popularity: Eugenia, Pelagia, Euphrasia, Thais, Marina, among many others. A number of them share with Euphrosyne the motif of the monachoparthenos, the female transvestite who enters a monastery or becomes a hermit in the desert: Pelagia (adopting the name of Pelagius), Marina (Marinus), Eugenia (Eugenius), Athanasia of Antioch (Athanasius), Theodora of Alexandria (Theodorus), Hilaria (Hilarion), Apollinaria (Dorotheus), and Anastasia the Patrician, among others<sup>3</sup>. Thecla, one of the earliest paradigms of female sanctity, used garments modelled on male clothes for a certain period of time<sup>4</sup>. A few assumed the identity of a eunuch, such as Euphrosyne, who called herself Smaragdus ('emerald', or any precious stone of a bright green colour)<sup>5</sup>. The stories are usually staged in the cities of Alexandria, Constantinople, and Antioch, and were probably composed in the sixth century in that area. All of them share a common feature: the refusal of social conventions and earthly riches, and the rejection of the role that was predetermined for, and imposed upon, them.

This group of hagiographical accounts and these sorts of themes achieved a large circulation in ascetic and monastic milieux in the eastern Mediterranean in the sixth and seventh centuries. They travelled in clusters, often together with other works of ascetic and edificatory literature, usually related to Egypt and the Middle East, such as the so-called Vitae patrum. Symptomatically, Euphrosyne's father is called Paphnutius, a typical name in this sort of story: this is the name of three distinct monks in Palladius' Historia Lausiaca, it is also the name of a monk in Rufinus' Historia Monachorum, among other examples.

The history of the transmission and circulation of the narrative of Euphrosyne's life and deeds, and of her father Paphnutius, is complex and fascinating. Very early, probably in the late sixth century, a Greek Bios was composed (BHG 625-625b). This anonymous account circulated widely. It was copied, modified, and adapted to different audiences, always anonymously. More than fifty medieval manuscripts survive, the earliest dating to the early tenth century. Eventually, Euphrosyne was introduced into the Byzantine liturgy. The Synaxarion Constantinopolitanum, which assembled materials of the ninth and tenth centuries, celebrated Euphrosyne on 25 September, and incorporated a short account of her life<sup>6</sup>. Likewise the so-called Typikon of the Great Church of Constantinople, composed in the late ninth century<sup>7</sup>, and the menology produced for Basil II (976-1025). Most of the extant copies of the Bios from the tenth to the twelfth century are in menologies, produced in the eastern Mediterranean and in Italo-Greek communities. Her feast day is always 25 September<sup>8</sup>.

The Bios was translated into other languages. In the eastern Mediterranean, we have versions in Syriac (BHO 288-9)<sup>9</sup>, Armenian (BHO 290-

8. In the Middle Ages, other texts telling the story of Euphrosyne were composed. In the tenth century, Symeon Metaphrastes wrote a Life of Euphrosyne (BHG 626; PG 114, 305-22, from Paris, BnF, gr. 1526). See L. Franco, Rewriting the Life of Euphrosyne (BHG 625, BHG 626), in P. Farmhouse Alberto, P. Chiesa and M. Goulet, Understanding Hagiography: Studies in the Textual Transmission of Early Medieval Saints' Lives, Florence 2020 (Quaderni di Hagiographica, 17), pp. 113-126. In the thirteenth century, a Life in verse appears in a synaxarium metricum (BHG 626n).

9. The version BHO 289 (Bibliotheca Hagiographica Orientalis, ed. P. Peeters, Bruxelles 1954 (Subsidia hagiographica, 10)), is a translation ad verbum of the Greek Bios, copied by John the Styliste, of Beth-Mari-Ḳaddisha, in Qanūn, near Antioch, in 778. John copied an anthology of fifteen female saints' Lives. Some of them are common in this sort of context, such as Thecla, Eugenia, Pelagia, Marina, Euphemia, Theodosia, among others. John's copy is today in MS Sinai, St- Catherine Monastery, Syr. 30 (Kamil 74). It is a palimpsest, our anthology in the upper script (in the under script we have a copy of the Old Syriac Gospels). It is worth noting that we have a few Greek manuscripts from this monastery (see Chapter 2). The anthology is edited and translated by Anne Smith Lewis, in Select Narratives of Holy Women from the Syro-Antiochene or Sinai Palimpsest as Written Above the Old Syriac Gospels by John the <sup>10</sup>), and Arabic<sup>11</sup>. Some centuries later, we have translations in a variety of vernacular languages<sup>12</sup>. But it was in the Latin-speaking world that this anonymous text achieved its greatest success<sup>13</sup>. As far as we can reconstruct from the available evidence, we have three different translations, each one deriving from a particular line of transmission of the Greek text.

II. Translation, pp. 46-59 (the translation was reprinted in «Vox Benedictina. A Journal of Translations from Monastic Sources», 1/3 (1984), pp. 140-56). Version BHO 288 is published in P. Bedjan, Acta martyrum et sanctorum, t. V, Paris 1895, pp. 386-405. Bedjan used Paris, BnF, Syriaque 23, a. 1192, Antioch (Syria), fols. 213v-21v, collated with London, BL, add. 14649, fols. 19 fols., s. IX. <sup>10</sup>. The editions are identified in the Bibliotheca Hagiographica Orientalis (BHO). BHO 290 and 291 are different redactions of the same text. The latter is in Nerses Sarkissian (ed.), Lives of the Holy Fathers and Their Politeia According to the Double Translation of the Ancestors, Venice 1855, vol. 1, and is based on Jerusalem, Library of the Armenian Patriarchate, 228, which is a copy of Jerusalem, Library of the Armenian Patriarchate, 285, made in 1430 at the monastery of St. Anthony the Great in Kaffa, Crimea. In 1443, it was transferred to Jerusalem, where it was the model of Jerusalem, Armenian Patriarchate, 228. In this manuscript, a colophon after the Vita Onophri (f. 299) states that in 1110 Gregory III revised an earlier translation of this Vita in Egypt. We do not know if the same applies to the Vita Euphrosynae. See A. Avagyan, The Armenian Transmission of the «Apophthegmata Patrum», in S. Ashbrook Harvey, T. Arentzen, H. Rydell Johnsén, and A. One of them, classified 2722 in the Bibliotheca Hagiographica Latina, which I designate «Translation A», Redaction 1, descends from an exemplar in a high stemmatic position. It may have been produced between the seventh and the mid-eighth century. The earliest extant copy, Montpellier H 55, was produced in Francia in the early ninth century, possibly for a high-ranking female audience in Troyes, and presents indications of being copied from an ancient Merovingian exemplar. Another redaction of the same translation is the Vita Castissimae (BHL 1640), which Baudouin de Gaiffier classified as a “doublet” of Euphrosyne<sup>14</sup> – actually, Castissima, the Latin translation of the heroine’s name, is also the name of the protagonist in the manuscripts of BHL 2722. This redaction is found in a tenth-century collection of female saints’ lives, assembled in the south of Burgos, Kingdom of León.

A second translation (BHL 2723-2723A, «Translation B») derives from a different line of transmission. This line of transmission was a reworked redaction offering substantial additions, represented, among the manuscripts used in the present edition, by the tenth-century Paris, BnF, grec 1538. This translation was by far the most widely read Latin version of the Vita Euphrasynae in the Middle Ages. Over one hundred copies produced up to the fifteenth century survive. The earliest copies were produced in the late eighth and early ninth century in Carolingian Francia (Würzburg, M.p.th.q. 26; Düsseldorf B. 3). Usually, this version circulated in ascetic and monastic contexts, often connected with a female audience.

A third translation (BHL 2725, «Translation C») descends from a line of the Greek transmission which I call ε. Unlike the two Latin translations, this one never achieved a wide circulation. It is found in a manuscript of Pacificus of Verona (Verona, Bibl. Cap. xcv [90]), inside a collection of female saints’ lives, and in a few later Italian manuscripts<sup>15</sup>.

15. In the Middle Ages, other texts on Euphrosyne were composed. In Montecassino, Biblioteca della Badia, 140, eleventh century, we have a different Vita (BHL 2724): inc. Fuit vir quidam in Alexandria, Paphnutius nomine, dives valde et honorabilis. This text is given in Appendix 1. In a manuscript of the third quarter of the thirteenth-century (Bern, Burgerbibliothek, 377, fols. 109r-10v), we have a metrical Life (BHL 2725d). In fifteenth-century Novara, Biblioteca Capitolare, 27, fols. 29r-32r, we find a different text (BHL 2725e). A Vita metrica (BHL 2726f), possibly composed by Gehard of Grafschaft (†1172), is found in Darmstadt Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek 749, Part II (fols. 89-146), fols. 129r-36v, a manuscript written in the third quarter of the twelfth century in Grafschaft, St. Alexander abbey. See F. Dolbeau and J.-Y. Tilliette, Vie métrique de sainte Pélagie attribuable à Gevebardus de Grafschaft, in Pélagie la Pénitente: métamorphoses d’une légende, Tome II. La survie dans les littératures européennes, Paris 1984, pp. 129-44, at p. 129. Another Vita metrica survives in Wien, ÖNB 488, fols. 47r-49r (BHL 2726d), and was published by Franz Unterkircher in Zwei Vers-Viten des 13 Jhs. (Hl.

In sum, the main lines of transmission of the Greek text and Latin translations in the Middle Ages can roughly be represented as follows:

The meaning and details of this diagram will be discussed in the following chapters.

In general, the diffusion of the Vita Euphrosynae in the western regions of the Mediterranean prior to the twelfth century in its various redactions and translations was not especially connected to liturgical needs, in contrast to what we observe in the eastern Mediterranean. The Latin copies are usually not found in hagiographical collections per circulum anni – and whenever they are, they lack the feast day – but in anthologies of ascetic and edificatory literature, together with similar Vitae, such as those of Marina or Pelagia.

Nevertheless, Euphrosyne is recorded in the major Carolingian martyrologies, though she was not included in earlier martyrologies, such as the Martyrology of Jerome and that attributed to Bede. She appears for the first time in the so-called Anonymous of Lyons, composed in the first years of the ninth century<sup>16</sup>. Modelled on an exemplar of the so-called “second family” of the martyrology attributed to Bede, it presents a summary of the Vita Euphrosynae on 1 January<sup>17</sup>:

Ursula und Hl. Euphrosyne) in der Wiener Handschrift cod. 488, «Analecta Bollandiana», 88 (1970), pp. 301–16 (at pp. 311–6). A Vita merita (BHL 2726), inc. Euphrosyna, tuam fer opem mibi, expl. ciuiis Alexandriae Paphnicius fuit urbis, is printed in AASS, Febr. t. II, p. 536, from a manuscript from Trier.

16. A synthesis of the origins and the date of composition, at some point before 806 or 807 at the latest, is offered in F. Peloux, Lyon au temps d’Agobard, réceptacle hispanique et laboratoire hagiographique, in M.-C. Isaïa, F. Bougard, and A. Charansonnet (eds.), Lyon dans l’Europe carolingienne. Autour d’Agobard (816–2016), Turnhout 2019 (HAMA 36), pp. 75–92, at pp. 79–82.

17. Paris, BnF, lat. 3879, fols. 68r–96v, on fol. 68v. The text is in J. Dubois and G. Renaud, Édition pratique des martyrologes de Bède, de l’Anonyme Lyonnais, et de Florus, Paris 1976, pp.

Et apud Alexandriam, transitus sanctae Eufrosinae uirginis, quae orationibus patris sui Pafnutii de sterili matre progenita, in puellari aetate constituta, clam se tonderti fecit et monasticam uitam expetuit, Smaragdi sibi nomen imponens. Deinde etiam recludi se fecit, atque in eadem reclusione uiginti et octo annis in omni sanctitate perdurans, tacta aegrotationis incommodo et mortem sibi adesse cognoscens, manifestauit se patri. Cumque quieuisset, sepulta est a fratribus in ecclesia.

The martyrology attributed to Florus, the “first recension” of which is considered to have been compiled before 837, does not follow the Anonymous of Lyons, its main source, giving instead a very short entry: apud Alexandriam sanctae Euphrosynae uirginis<sup>18</sup>.

The martyrology of Ado, compiled between 853 and 860, perhaps around 855, offers the same entry as the Anonymous of Lyons, with a small addition: instead of manifestauit se patri, it has the more emotional manifestauit se religioso et lacrimis multoties quaerenti patri<sup>19</sup>. Wandalbert of Prüm, in his metrical martyrology composed between 830 and 850, likely in 848, only records the name of the saint: Eufrosina simul niter<sup>20</sup>. In contrast, Hrabanus Maurus’ martyrology, written between 843 and 854, ignores the saint entirely<sup>21</sup>. The martyrology of Usuard, finished shortly after 858 and before the acquaintance of Usuard with Eulogius of Córdoba’s death, in March 859, repeats Florus’ notice<sup>22</sup>.

Finally, the martyrology of Notker the Stammerer, composed between 890 and 912 at the abbey of St Gallen, reproduces Ado’s entry found in the MS St Gallen, Stiftsbibliothek 454, and adds a concluding cuius nomen et conuersatio sub interpretatione Castissimae apud Romanos celebris habetur<sup>23</sup>.

5-6. The edition exhibits some changes relative to the manuscript: alexandriam: alexandrinam cod.; smaragdi: ismaragdi cod.; includi: inclusi cod.; cum: cumque cod. The date 1 January is found in copies of the eleventh century. Interestingly, the Martyrology of Jerome offers a bishop of Nicomedia Euphrosynus on 1 January (AASS Nov. 2.1, p. 57; see Paris, BnF, lat. 10837, Part I (fols. 2-33), written in 703/710 at Echternach by Laurentius for Archbishop Willibord, fol. 3r, and Wolfenbüttel, Herzog-August Bibliothek, Weissenburg 81, copied in 772 at, or for, St Servatius of Maastricht, fol. 12r: Nicomedia Eufrosini episcopi, Primiani (Priani in the Paris manuscript) et aliorum VIII). Perhaps this may explain the day of Euphrosyne.

In spite of the martyrologies, a fact is that the Vita Euphrosynae rarely appeared as a liturgical piece in western medieval Christendom up to the twelfth century. Above all, the account of Euphrosyne's life remained a beautiful story for enlightenment and inspiration<sup>24</sup>.

Over the course of Late Antiquity and the Middle Ages, the Vita Euphrosynae was transmitted from generation to generation, providing one more example of female sanctity and a source of inspiration to a large audience. The text and its multiple textual versions always travelled anonymously, either in a liturgical context, as in the eastern Mediterranean, or within ascetic and hagiographical literature, as in the western Mediterranean. All these forms of the same text are conspicuous examples of a well-studied phenomenon: the fluidity and the plasticity of the hagiographical text, as shown by Monique Goulet in her remarkable study Écriture et réécriture hagiographiques<sup>25</sup>. This phenomenon is even more fascinating when every version of the text, each one depending from another, is anonymous. In what follows, I shall inquire into the main lines of transmission of the Greek and Latin texts and their history and dissemination up to the late twelfth century. This will provide a picture of the main paths of the text and the transformations it underwent in the Middle Ages. In the Appendix, I give an example of a distinct Vita Euphrosynae, incorporated into an eleventh-century assemblage of ascetic literature, modelled on Translation B.

24. The Vita Euphrosynae may have inspired authors of other hagiographical accounts: see, especially, J. Van Pelt, Disguised Identity and Recognition in the Life of Gregory of Agrigento (BHG 707), «Greek, Roman, and Byzantine Studies», 60 (2020), pp. 272-89 (at pp. 284-8).

25. The bibliography is vast. Besides Goulet (*Écriture et réécriture hagiographiques. II.
THE GREEK «LIFE OF EUPHROSYNE»
(«BHG» 625)

The anonymous pre-metaphrastic Vita Euphrosynae, which was the source of the Latin translations that emerged in the late eighth and early ninth century in Francia and northern Italy, was transmitted by a good number of menologies and other types of hagiographical collections, produced both in the eastern Mediterranean area and in a number of Italo-Greek communities. In the present edition, only manuscripts from the tenth to the twelfth century will be used. They are fairly representative of the earliest stages of the textual history and the configuration of the sources used by the Latin translators.

On the following pages, I briefly present the manuscripts used in the edition, before studying the transmission of the Bios<sup>1</sup>.

THE MANUSCRIPTS

s. X <sup>2</sup>/4, Macedonia (?), 253 fols., 38 × 22.5 cm, 38 lines in two columns; owner: Archbishopric of Ohrid<sup>2</sup>.

1. Bibliography and discussion of other relevant elements of each manuscript can be found in Pinakes: Textes et manuscrits grecs database of the Institut de Recherche et d'Histoire des Textes, Paris, which incorporates the database BHGms compiled by the Société des Bollandistes, Brussels. The complete list of manuscripts containing BHG 625-625a can also be found in Pinakes. It records fifty-four manuscripts so far (note that Istanbul, Patriarchal Library, 8, copied in the eleventh century, fols. 173v-81v, contains Symeon the Metaphrast's vita, BHG 626, not our anonymous BHG 625). This chapter presents the manuscripts in chronological order. To find a particular manuscript, the reader should use the Index Codicum.

According to Axinia Džurova, this quarterly menology (September–November) was produced in the second quarter of the tenth century. Paul Canart suggested that it presents similarities to other manuscripts copied in Macedonia<sup>3</sup>. Today, it only covers the month from 20 September (Vita Eu-stathii et soc. Romae, BHG 641) to 22 October (Pueri VII dormientes in Epheso, BHG 1596). This last text is mutilated at the end, for the subsequent leaves are lost. The Vita Euphrosyne is copied on pp. 36–47, between the Acta Pauli et Thecla (BHG 1712–4, pp. 17–29), followed by the Miracula (BHG 1718m, pp. 29–35), and a dossier of the Acta Iohannis theologi apostoli (pp. 47–96)<sup>4</sup>.

2. Ohrid, Naroden Muzej, 44, part II (pp. 47–668, 699–812) (= OI)

s. X ½, area of Constantinople; 406 fols.; 27.5 × 18.5 cm; 28/32 long lines; owner: Archbishopric of Ohrid<sup>5</sup>.

Axiana Džurova dated this section of the codex to the first half of the tenth century, and considered that it may have been copied in some centre on the periphery of Constantinople. OI is an annual pre-metaphrastic collection. In the surviving leaves, many of which are out of order, we have from the feast of the Innocents of Jerusalem on 29 December (BHG 827b), truncated at the beginning, followed by Amphilochius of Iconium's Vita et miracula Basilii Magni

The Vita Euphrosyne is found on p. 264, after a sequence of February saints: the Hypapante (BHG 1925) on 2 February, the Passio Blasii episcopi Sebastiae (BHG 276) on 11 February, and the Vita Martiniani eremitae in Palaestina (BHG 1177) on 13 February. After this last text, we have the beginning of the Vita Euphrosynae, up to 1.4 οἴκους ἀναλόσασα (p. 264). The following folios are lost. In the present configuration of the manuscript, after this gap, from p. 265 onwards we have the Vita Eugenii et Mariae (BHG 615), celebrated on 12 February, and the Passio Theodori tironis (BHG 1761), commemorated on 17 February.

s. X; 180 fols.; 36 × 25 cm (Paris gr. 1454) + 297 fols., 36,5 × 28 cm (Coisl. 105); 2 cols. 36 lines; owners: St Neophytos, Paphos, Cyprus (s. XII); Jean-Baptiste Colbert (1619-1683) (fol. 1r: «Colb. 427»); Bibliothèque royale (1732) (fol. 1r: «2014<sup>2</sup>»)<sup>6</sup>.

This menology for the winter semester is today split into two manuscripts preserved in the Bibliothèque Nationale de France. Grec 1454 runs from 1 September (Vita Symeonis Stylitae senioris, BHG 1682-5) to 15 November (Vita Guriae, Samonae et Abibi, BHG 739, numbered 27). This last text is truncated at the end. Coislin 105 runs from 17 November (Gregory of Nyssa's Vita Gregorii Thaumaturgi, BHG 715b, numbered 29, truncated at the beginning) to 24 February (Iohannes Baptista praecursor Domini, Prima inventio et translatio capitis Emesam, BHG 839, numbered 60, and Marcellus Archimandrita, S. Iohannis Baptistae capitinis inventio secunda, BHG 840bc, numbered 61)<sup>7</sup>. In the late twelfth century, it was in the monastery of St Neophytus in Paphos,

4. Paris, Bibliothèque nationale de France, gr. 1506 (+ gr. 1540) (= B)

s. X, 204 fols., 28 × 20 cm (Paris gr. 1506) + 213 fols. 27.5 × 21 (Paris gr. 1540); 24/25 long lines. Owners: Athos, monastery of Esfigmenou; Jean-Baptiste Colbert (1619-1683) (gr. 1506, fol. 1r: «Colb. 1931»; gr. 1540, fol. 1r «1932»); Bibliothèque royale (1732) (gr. 1506, fol. 1r: «2447<sup>3</sup>», gr. 1540, fol. 1r: «2447<sup>4</sup>»)<sup>8</sup>.

Paris gr. 1506 and gr. 1540 contain a two-month menology, covering the initial part of the calendar, September and October. The first manuscript runs from 1 September (Vita Symeonis Stylitae, BHG 1682) to 3 October (Martyrium Dionysii Areopagitae, BHG 554). The second runs from 6 October (Acta Thomae ap., BHG 1800-7g; fols. 126r-v and 1r-10r) to 29 October (Ephrem, In vitam beati Abraharnii et neptis eius Mariae; BHG 5-6, truncated at the end). The Vita Euphrosynae is found on fols. 40r-51r, between the Vita Theodorae Alexandrinae, 11 September (BHG 1727-9), and the Vita Iacobi eremitae, 10 September (BHG 770, truncated at the end, for the subsequent folios are lost), followed from fol. 52r onwards by the Martyrium Eustathii et soc. Romae, usually celebrated on 20 September (BHG 641).

s. X; 244 fols., 39 × 28.5 cm. 2 columns of 38 lines. Owner: Sinai, Saint Catherine's Monastery<sup>9</sup>.

S presents a menology corresponding to the winter semester. It starts on 1 September, with the Vita Symeonis Stylitae (BHG 1685), and ends on 13 February, with the Vita Martiniani (BHG 1177), truncated at the end. Nine folios missing in Sinai 519 are today London, BL, Add. 26114<sup>10</sup>.

s. X, 235 fols.; 29 × 2.52 cm; 2 columns of 36 lines. Owner: Sinai, Saint Catherine's Monastery<sup>11</sup>.

The manuscript presents a menology for the winter semester. It runs from 1 September (Vita Symeonis Stylitae Senioris, BHG 1685), truncated at the beginning, to the Martyrium Blasii ep. Sebastiae, celebrated on 11 February (BHG 276-276c), followed by the Martyrium Agathae m. Catanae, 5 February (BHG 37) and two texts out of order, the Vita Theodorae Alexandrinae, 11 September (BHG 1727-9) and the Vita Iohannis Calybitae ascetae, 15 January (BHG 868).

The Vita Euphrosynae, with an identical title to that in S, is found on fols. 42r-7v, between the Acta Pauli et Theclae, 24 September (BHG 1710, 1718n, 1716, 1716<sup>a</sup>), and Iacobus diaconus' Paenitentia Pelagiae, 8 October (BHG 1478d).

This hagiographical non-menological collection, produced in some centre in Calabria, was associated to the «school of Nilus» by Santo Lucà, who dated the manuscript to the second half of the tenth century<sup>13</sup>. It arrived in Milan in 1607. It comprises some eighty texts. The Vita Euphrosyne is copied on fols. 128r-32r, between Ps.-Eusebius Alexandrinus, Sermo 5 (De presbyteris, BHG 635i, CPG 5514) and the Vita Donati ep. Euroeae in Epiro (BHG 2112).

8. Vatican City, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana, Vat. gr. 1987 (= V2)

s. X 3/3, southern Italy; 143 fols.; 20.5 × 15 cm; 29-31 long line; owners: San Basilio de Urbe, Rome (1697-1699: «Bas. 26»); Bibliotheca Apostolica Vaticana (1786)<sup>14</sup>.

This non-menological hagiographical collection was produced in southern Italy, as the Vita Erasmi and several other texts seem to imply. On palaeographical grounds, it shows some influence of the «school of Nilos», as suggested by Santo Lucà<sup>15</sup>. It was brought from Calabria by Pietro Menniti, General Abbot of the Basilians (1696-1718), to the monastery of San Basilio de Urbe, Rome, between 1697 and 1699. In the list of manuscripts compiled after 1700 by Giovanni Crisostomo Scarfò (1685-1740) it was numbered «26».

It entered the Vatican Library in the time of Pius VI. The leaves are very much out of order. The Vita Euphrosynae is unnumbered, unlike many of the other texts, and there are no other elements for establishing its original position within the anthology. Currently it is found on fols. 24r-30v, between two portions of the Vita Theodorae (BHG 1727-9; fols. 46v, 31r-38v, 23r-v), which is itself preceded by the Passio Ciryci et Iulitiae (BHG 315; fols. 40r-42v) and the Passio Anastasiae (BHG 76z; fols. 42v-46v), all three also unnumbered.

s. X ex.; 380 fols.; 36 × 26 cm; 2 columns of 25/28 lines; owner: Biblioteca Vaticana (s. XV-XVI)<sup>16</sup>.

V is a quarterly menology corresponding to the months of September, October, and November. It begins with Antonius hagiographus' Vita Symeonis Stylitae Senioris (BHG 1685; 1 September), and runs to the Passio Iacobi Persae (BHG 772b; 27 November), truncated at the end. The Vita Euphrosynae is copied on fols. 105v-15v, between the Acta Pauli et Theclae (BHG 1710; 24 September) and the Confessio Cypriani et Iustinae (BHG 453; 2 October).

This ‘Halbjahrespanegyrik’, as Albert Ehrhard calls it, produced in Calabria, in the context of the «school of Nilus», according to Santo Lucà<sup>18</sup>, contains the winter semester. The first five quaternions and the first two folios of the sixth quire are lost, which correspond to the months of September and October. So today it begins with the Vita Cosmae et Damiani (BHG 372; 1 November) and runs to Amphilochius of Iconium’s sermon on the Hypapante (BHG 1964; 2 February). This last text is followed by a set of texts, the first of which is the Vita Euphrosynae (ff. 149r–56r). Then we have two apocryphal texts, the Apocalypsis Mariae (BHG 105ob) and the Testamentum Abrahae (BHG 2002), John Chrysostom’s Apocalypsis de die dominica (BHG 881w), and the Didascalia de quadragesima (BHG 812a).

As Eric Junod and Jean-Daniel Kaestli have remarked in their study of the transmission of chapters 55–6 of the Acta Iohannis, this manuscript is extremely similar to Laura Δ 50 (= L), presenting the same texts (except for the last two in L, which are missing in S2), the same layout and number of lines. Like L, it presents four months from September to December<sup>20</sup>. It starts on 1 September with the Vita Symeonis Stylitae (BHG 1684) and ends on 29 December with the In Herodem et innocentes (BHG 827c). The Vita Euphrosynae is copied on fols. 87v–94r, within the usual context, between the Acta Pauli et Theclae and Proclus’ Acta Iohannis theologi apostoli.

may have been copied in the late tenth or early eleventh century by a pupil of Nilus connected to Montecassino. It belonged to Cardinal Guglielmo Sirleto before entering the Vatican Library in 1585<sup>25</sup>.

It may have been produced for the diocese of Catania, as the contents suggest<sup>26</sup>. The initial textual set, preceding the assemblage in calendrical order, seems to support this idea. After the index on fol. 1r-v, which is mutilated at the beginning (it starts on 30 November), the rest of the verso and the following recto have been left unused<sup>27</sup>. On the verso of fol. 2 the copyist wrote John Chrysostom's epistle 125 to Cyriacus (BHG 881y), with a beautifully decorated initial in blue ink (ff. 2v-4r), followed by the Life of Leo of Catania, called the Thaumaturgus (BHG 981; fols. 4r-6v)<sup>28</sup>. At the end, there is an epigram addressed to a certain bishop Isidore, presented by the author as a devotee of Leo Thaumaturgus, and a sort of commissioner of the menology. Then comes Ephrem's Encomium in gloriosos martyres (BHG 1183; fols. 6v-7v). The sequence of Vitae and Martyria in calendrical order begins on fol. 8r. The first is Antonius Hagiographus' Vita Symeonis Stylitae Senioris (BHG 1685), celebrated on 1 September.

The Vita Euphrosynae is on fols. 33v-6r, between the Acta Iohannis theologi (BHG 912-3; 26 September) and the Passio Sozonis m. Pompeiopoli (BHG 1643; 7 September).

The manuscript presents a menology for the winter months (September to December), very similar to Sinai, St Catherine 497, our *S*2 (see above). Both manuscripts were most likely produced in Constantinople<sup>30</sup>. It begins with Antonius hagiographus' Vita Symeonis Stylitae Senioris (BHG 1684; 1 September), and ends with the In Herodem et innocentes (BHG 827c), celebrated on 29 December. This last text is followed by Menander Protector's Visio Constantini, inuentio Crucis et clavorum (BHG 396-409z) and a sermon on the Holy Cross (BHG 420k). The Vita Euphrosyne is on fols. 93v-100r, as usual between the Acta Pauli et Thecla (BHG 1710; 24 September) and the Acta Iohannis theologi (BHG 916; 26 September).

The manuscript, possibly copied in southern Italy according to Albert Ehrhard, contains a portion of a non-menological hagiographical collection. Some of the texts are related to Egypt:

16. Paris, Bibliothèque nationale de France, Coislin, 237 (= P4)

s. XI, 1 folio (f. 1); 34 long lines; owners of the codex: monastery τοῦ Μετεόρου; Pierre Séguier (1588-1672); Henri-Charles du Cambout, duc de Coislin (1665-1732); Abbaye de Saint-Germain-des-prés (1720); Bibliothèque royale (1824-1830)<sup>32</sup>.

This fragment consists of a single leaf attached to the beginning of an eleventh-century manuscript, once owned by the Monastery of Great Meteoron, containing epistles of Basil of Caesarea and Gregory of Nazianzus, which arrived in Paris in 1653. The folio, written in the eleventh century, presents the text from 12.4 φίλοι to 14.5 ἀπήγαγε πρὸς αὐ<τὸν><sup>33</sup>.

17. Athos, Philotheou Monastery, 9, part III (ff. 208-368) (= F)

s. XI ex.; two columns of 36 lines; owner: Philotheou Monastery<sup>34</sup>.

This is a fragment of a menology covering four months (September to December). It has large gaps due to the loss of several folios, and the quaternions are frequently out of order. Currently, it runs from 24 September (Ps-Basil of Seleucia's De vita et miraculis sanctae Theclae, BHG 1717, fols. 219-33v, 244-61v, truncated at the beginning)<sup>35</sup>, to 11 November (Passio Menae, BHG 1254, fols. 367-8v, truncated at the end). The Vita Euphrosyne is found on fols. 312r-6v and 265r<sup>36</sup>. According to Ehrhard's reconstruction of the original structure of the hagiographical collection, the Vita preceded the Acta Cypriani et Iustinae (BHG 452), usually celebrated on 2 October, which starts on fol. 265r. Before the Vita Euphrosynae there is a gap: the preceding text, the Vita Gregorii Illuminatoris (BHG 712z), is truncated at the end (f. 311v). The beginning of the title of our text may be truncated.

Former shelfmarks: «anc. 74», «Séguier 68».

33. At the top of the leaf, there is one line, today illegible. It was perhaps still visible to Devreesse, who stated that the folio began with <ἀναζητήσεις ἐγίνοντο. Interestingly, ἐγίνοντο is a conjecture by Boucherie, absent from his model (Paris gr. 1454) and from all other copies used in the present edition.

s. XI ex., 138 fols., 41 × 30 cm; two columns of 36 lines<sup>37</sup>.

G is a September menology. It presents large gaps (the first fifteen quaternions are lost and several other quires and many leaves are missing), and in many places it is out of order<sup>38</sup>. Of the original codex, we have today the text from the final lines of the Passio Euphemiae, celebrated on 16 September (BHG 619a, fol. Ar-v and p. 1), to the Passio Dadae, Gobdelaee et Casdiae in Perside on 29 September (BHG 480a, pp. 107-16), according to Ehrhard. The Vita Euphrosyne is found on pp. 132-6 and 119-20, following the Vita Paphnutii et sociorum in Aegypto (BHG 1419a, pp. 121-4, 117-18, 125-32), celebrated on 24 September. The text presents the first eight chapters (1.1 ἐγένετο to 8.10 γύναι μή) and chapters 12.6 (ό πατήρ) to 16.2 (ή ψυχή μου).

This is a fragment of a hagiographical collection for the winter semester, covering September to the end of February, copied in Calabria in the late eleventh or early twelfth century, according to Santo Lucà. Today, it contains only the months of September to December. It begins with Antonius ha-giographus' Vita Symeonis Styliiae Senioris (BHG 1685, 1 September) and ends with the Passio Barbarae (BHG 213, 4 December). A later hand, perhaps of the thirteenth century, completed the text and copied the Acta Nicolai Myren-sis (BHG 1350, fols. 211–16v; 6 December), now the last piece of the codex. The Vita Euphrosynae is copied on fols. 53r–9r, between the Acta Pauli et The-clae, followed by the Miracula (BHG 1710 and 1718n; 24 September), and the Acta Iohannis theologi (BHG 916–17; 26 September).

20. Milan, Biblioteca Ambrosiana, F 32 sup. (= M2)

1 fol., s. XII 1/4, Calabria?; 218 fols, 21 × 16.5 cm; 29 long lines; owners of the codex: possibly Santi Pietro e Paolo di Arena (Calabria) (f. 218r); Federico Borromeo (1564–1631) (1607)<sup>40</sup>.

This sole leaf (f. B) is presently attached to the beginning of a manuscript containing Isaac Ninivita Syrus' Sermones ascetici (CPG 7868.1, fols. 1r–159v) and Maximus the Confessor's Capita de caritate (CPG 7693). The manuscript is datable to the first quarter of the twelfth century and was produced in the style of the «school of Rossano»<sup>41</sup>. In the sixteenth century it was possibly in the abbey of Santi Pietro e Paolo di Arena. In 1607, it arrived in Milan<sup>42</sup>. Folio B belonged to a manuscript written in the twelfth century. According to Santo Lucà, the script also shows some affinity with the «school of Rossano». The fragment – presenting only section 1.7 to 4.6 – exhibits many textual coincidences with other copies from southern Italy, namely P, M, and V3.

In this collection of hagiographical and theological works, produced in the twelfth century as confirmed by Santo Lucà, the Vita Euphrosynae is copied on fols. 268v-77r, between John Chrysostom's De Susanna sermo (BHG 2406) and Ephrem's In vanam vitam et de paenitentia (BHG 2103n).

A quarterly menology covering September, October, and November. It begins with Antonius hagiographus' Vita Symeonis Stylitae Senioris (BHG 1684; 1 September), and ends with the Epistula presbyterorum et diaconorum Achaiae (BHG 93; 30 November). It has a number of gaps, due to the loss of folios. The Vita Euphrosynae is copied on fols. 86r-94r, between the Acta Pauli et Thecla (BHG 1710, 1716; 24 September) and the Acta Iohannis theologi (BHG 916-17; 26 September).

Finally, I can mention Athos, Monastery of the Great Lavra, K 122 B, s. XI, a post-metaphrastic, non-menological collection<sup>45</sup>. The Vita Euphrosynae is copied on fols. 145-56, between Constantinus Tionensis' In inuentionem reliquiarum S. Euphemiae (BHG 621) and Ammonius monachus' De sanctis Partibus barbarorum incursione peremptis (BHG 1300). Unfortunately, I have not been able to examine the manuscript, as the monastery is currently closed due to building and restoration works, nor have I found a reproduction of the folios.

THE TRANSMISSION OF THE TEXT

The earliest extant witnesses of the Greek bios date from the tenth century. They number almost a dozen, produced both in the eastern Mediterranean and in southern Italy. Study reveals a long story of transmission and dissemination. Over the centuries, slightly different versions emerged, corresponding sometimes to stylistic refinements, at other times to changes caused by errors committed by scribes, features which descendants inherited, or to intentional modifications of the text.

All extant copies studied in the present edition – all of them prior to the late twelfth century – may descend from an early model already containing a few errors (= ω'). The conjunction ὥσπερ is Anatole Boucherie's proposal for 15.4, in the face of the variety of solutions to the corrupt passage in the manuscripts. In 12.4, ἐγίγνοντο was suggested by Boucherie in order to provide the sentence with a verb<sup>46</sup>.

Two tenth-century manuscripts offer an almost identical text, as demonstrated by a number of common and exclusive readings and variants. I designate their common ancestor as α. One of them is O (Ohrid, 4), a quarterly menology covering September-November, copied in the second quarter of the tenth century, possibly in the Macedonian area, containing several texts in peculiar textual versions. The other is A (Paris gr. 1454), a menology for the winter semester, owned in the twelfth century by the monastery of St Neophytos in Paphos. This is the manuscript transcribed by Anatole Boucherie in his article published in 1883 (see below). I give a few examples of readings exclusively found in O and A (see also the subsequent table).

	β	α (= O A)
5.4	δύο εἰσὶν	om.
5.4	—	ἀποκριθεῖσα
10.4	λόγιον	ἄγιον
11.6	καὶ ἀγρυπνίαις	om.

On the other hand, the consensus between O and the other Greek witnesses permits us to identify the deviations of A from its ancestor. For instance, in 21.2 A lacks ήσύχασεν ἐν τῷ κελλίῳ τῆς αὐτοῦ θυγατρός, given by O, all other Greek witnesses, the Latin translation A, and the Syriac translation. In 12.9, ἔκεινη τῶν μόχθων ή ἀνάπτασις is missing in A, against all other Greek manuscripts, the Latin translation A, and the Syriac translation. In 11.6, ἦν ήσυχάζων ἐν τῷ ἀναχωρητικῷ κελλίῳ ... προσεδρεύων τῷ Θεῷ, A exhibits ήσύχαζον ἐν τῷ ἀναχωρητικῷ κελλίῳ ... προσεδρεύοντες, against all the other witnesses and the ancient translations, giving the bizarre phrase “both 46. Boucherie considered 12.10 γῆ μὴ ἐπικαλύψῃς ἐφ' αἴματι σαρκός μου a truncated passage. But the sentence is Job 16.18.

Smaragdus and Agapius entered the same cell and prayed and fasted together”, an impossibility when the whole passage is considered. A is not a copy of O since it does not present several errors in O. See, for instance, 3.2 δεξιᾶς εἶναι φύσεως: ἐπιδεξιος οῦσα O; 20.1 τῶν ἀδελφῶν om. O, among others.

All other manuscripts represent a different line of transmission, hereafter β. Their lost common ancestor is characterised by a number of variants. Below are a few of them:

	α	β
5.2	ό ἀδελφὸς	om.
6.1	μοναχικοῦ	μονήρους
7.2	ἀπέστειλέν με ... πρός σε	εἴπεν (ἢκαν καὶ εἴπεν C, ἐγκαλεῖ σε B)
7.5	καὶ ἄγει	om.
9.2	ἐσπέρας βαθείας	ἐσπέρας γενομένης / καταλαβούσης
15.2	ῳρμῆσεν περιπλακῆναι θέλων	οὗς ἦν περιπλακῆναι θέλων

See also some specific constructions in β. For instance, 12.1 ὁ δὲ πατίρ ... ἐλθών and 16.4 ἀπελθών οὖν ὁ Παφνούτιος καὶ ἐπιπεσών are rendered as τοῦ δὲ πατρός ... ἐλθόντος and ἀπελθόντος οὖν τοῦ Παφνούτιου καὶ ἐπιπεσόντος in β. It was a β-exemplar in a high stemmatic position that was the model of Translation A.

S<sub>2</sub> (Sinai 497), a late tenth- or early eleventh-century menology for the winter semester, and L (Lavra Δ 50), an eleventh-century menology covering four months (September–December), both copied in Constantinople, are twin copies of the same model (= κ). See, for instance, from the huge amount of evidence, some examples:

	α B C δ	κ (= S <sub>2</sub> L)
4.5	ἰσάγγελοι / ἄγγελοι	ἴσοι ἀγγέλων
4.7	δεῦρο	δέου
4.10	εὐάρεστος	εὐχαριστῶν
5.6	ναί, εἴ τις θέλει ἐλθεῖν, δέχεται αὐτὸν ό ὀββᾶς	ὅτι ὅστις ἀν ἐλθῃ δέχεται αὐτὸν ὁ ἡγούμενος
7.1	ἔλεγεν ὁ μοναχὸς ... ἐσκύλης	om.
7.2	λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ μοναχὸς	λέγει ὁ μοναχὸς πρὸς κύριν παφνούτιον
10.4	ἀδελφῶν	μοναχῶν
12.4	κατοχαὶ πλοίων καὶ ζητήσεις	om.
12.6	οἵμοι φῶς τῶν ἐμῶν ὀφθαλμῶν	om.
12.7	τίς τὸν ἐμὸν πλοῦτον ἐσκόρπισεν	om.
20.2	ὑπογραμμοὺς σωτηρίας	om.

In both S<sub>2</sub> and L, section 5.6 is copied twice; later, one of these was erased. A few details seem to suggest that L is not a descriptus of S<sub>2</sub>. See, for instance, 3.4 ἔφασκεν: ἔφασεν S<sub>2</sub>; 7.11 καὶ δὴ is missing in S<sub>2</sub>, but not in L, 12.8 τόπος τὸ is missing in S<sub>2</sub>, but not in L. But this evidence is not enough to prove beyond any reasonable doubt that L is not a copy of S<sub>2</sub>.

All other copies derive from a common ancestor, hereafter  $\gamma$ , as shown by a number of common readings, all too insignificant to be explained by an operation of emendation and too numerous to be a coincidence. Some examples of the variants of  $\gamma$ :

	$\alpha \kappa$	$\gamma$
1.2	καὶ πλουσίαν σφόδρα	om.
4.9	εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν	om.
5.4	κύρι ἀββᾶ	om.
8.4	αὐτῷ ἐστι	τῷ πατρὶ σου
8.7	Εὐφροσύνη	κόρη
8.8	τοῦ μοναχοῦ	om.
9.5	ὑμῖν	σοι
9.7	ἡ εὐλογημένη (ἢ ἀγία Α)	om.
13.1	τοῦ ἀμαρτωλοῦ	om.
13.7	ἐκδύνσα ἐαυτὴν	om.
13.7	ὁ Θεός παρεῖδεν	παρεῖδεν ὁ Θεός
16.6	κύριέ μου	om.
17.5	καὶ αὐτὸς	om.
18.2	δραμῶν	εἰσδραμῶν
18.3	πράγματα	om.
19.4	τὸ τίμιον	τὸ ἄγιον
20.2	πράγματα	θαύματα

No  $\gamma$ -reading proves beyond any reasonable doubt that it is better than  $\alpha$  and  $\kappa$ , that is, that  $\gamma$  derives directly from  $\omega'$ . In the absence of such proof, and considering the common readings of  $\kappa$  and  $\gamma$ , it is more likely that both  $\kappa$  and  $\gamma$  descend from a common ancestor  $\beta$ <sup>47</sup>.

The tenth-century B (Paris gr. 1506), possibly produced on Mount Athos, offers the closest text to  $\gamma$ . It presents a few omissions (3.3 πολυμαθίας ... σώματος αὐτῆς; 12.5 ὁ νεανίας τὴν ὄρμαστήν; 13.3 καὶ κοπιάσατε καὶ νηστεύσατε μίαν ἐβδομάδα; 16.6–7 καὶ μὴ ἀποστῆς ... ἐκέλευσας), additions (12.8 ἐν βυθῷ κατέχει τὸ φαινὸν πρόσωπον. ποῖος δὲ βασιλεὺς add. post πέλαγος), and rephrasing (10.5 ὥσπερ σὺ ἀρκετὸν γὰρ εἶναι τὸν μαθητὴν ὡς ὁ διδάσκαλος αὐτοῦ, instead of ἵνα ὑπερβάλλῃ τὸν διδάσκαλον). Instead, C (Paris gr. 1538), which incidentally is a non-menological collection of saints' lives copied in the late tenth or early eleventh, is by far the most heavily reworked textual form of the dossier of the Vita Euphrosynae. It presents large additions. The most evident passages are in chapters 15 and 16. The redaction represented by C was the model of the author of BHL 2723, our Translation B, composed prior to mid-eighth century.

All other copies – S S<sub>1</sub> V F G O<sub>1</sub> P<sub>4</sub> Sp P M V<sub>3</sub> VI M<sub>1</sub> V<sub>2</sub> M<sub>2</sub> K – derive from a lost exemplar, hereafter δ. They all share the same version of the beginning of chapter 2, stating that it did not take long when Paphnutius asked the abbot for help to fulfil his wish to have a child (against the idea that Paphnutius suffered for many years before he had a child), and that Euphrosyne was six years old when she was baptised (2.4). Some other examples of the characteristic errors and variants of this lost exemplar are:

	α κ B C	δ
1.4	έδέετο τοῦ Θεοῦ πληρωθῆναι τὴν δέησιν αὐτῆς	om.
3.2	–	ώς καὶ εὐχῆς καρπός
7.1	–	καὶ γνωρίσας

8.1	–	ἢ ἀδελφᾶς
12.3	ό όρμασάμενος αὐτὴν	ό νιὸς αὐτοῦ
12.5	ό νεανίας τὴν όρμαστήν	ό νυμφίος γυναικα ἀπέκλαιεν
12.7	τίς τὸν ἐμὸν λύχνον ἔσβεσεν	om.
12.7	τίς τοῦ ἐμοῦ οἴκου τὴν εὐπρέπειαν ἔλαβεν (τίς τὴν εὐπρέπειαν τοῦ ἐμοῦ οἴκου ἔχειρόσατο C)	tr. ante τίς τὰς ἐμὰς ἐλπίδας

17.1	ώς οὖν	ἐνστάσης οὖν τῆς τρίτης ήμέρας ὡς
20.2	οἰκτιρμοῖς σου	οἰκτιρμοῖς αὐτοῦ

Redaction δ may be connected to the ancestor of C rather than that of B. But C is a very heavily reworked version, and the evidence is fragile. See, for instance, a few variants exclusively found in C δ (= γ'):

	α κ B	γ' (= C δ)
1.4	παρασχεθῆναι	παρασχεῖν
1.6	ἄνθρωπον	om.

4.3	αὐτήν <sup>2</sup>	om.
4.7	Παφνούτιος	κύρις Παφνούτιος
5.5	ἔρχεται (ἀπέρχεται B )	θέλει ἐλθεῖν δ, θέλει ἔκει ἐλθεῖν C
9.4	γνῶσιν	σχέσιν
12.1	εύρων (εὑρόντος κ)	εὑρηκότος
16.7	—	φύσει οὐκ ἀφῶ σε τὰς τρεῖς ἡμέρας (οὐκ ἀφίσταμαι τὰς τρεῖς ἡμέρας C )
19.5	ἐδόξασαν	ἐδόξαζον

Within this class of manuscripts, two groups can be identified. One is formed by S (Sinai 519), S1 (Sinai 526), and V (Vat. gr. 797), all of the tenth century, plus the late eleventh-century G ('s-Gravenhage 10 A 5), and the twelfth-century Sp (Saint Petersburg Φ. 906, Gr. 213). They are all menologies: S and S1 for the winter semester, V and Sp for the September-November quarterly, G for the month of September. Some characteristic errors of the common ancestor, hereafter ε, can be exemplified with the following readings (G lacks from 8.10 συναπολεσθῆς, in apparatus, to 12.5 τὴν δέσποιναν, and from 16.2 ποθεῖ αὐτὸν to the end):

	rell.	ε
1.4	ἀναλώσασα	ἀναλίσκουσα
1.5	αὐτοῖς πρεσβεῦσαι	αὐτοῦ πληρῶσαι
1.7	—	καὶ εὐξάμενος
1.7	προσενέγκας	καρποφορήσας
3.4	—	καὶ ζεῦξαι
4.4	τῶν ψαλμωδιῶν / τῶν ψαλμῶν	τῆς ιερᾶς ψαλμωδίας
5.2-3	ό ἀδελφὸς ... παίδων εἰπόντων	ό πεμφθεῖς εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ καὶ μηνύσας ἔμαθεν
5.4	εἰσὶν ἐν τῷ κοινοβίῳ ἀδελφοί	ἀδελφοὶ ἐστὲ ἐν τῷ κοινοβίῳ

6.3	σώζῃ	σῶσον σεαυτήν
7.10	τῇ ταπεινῇ μου ψυχῇ	καὶ σῶσαι τὴν ταπεινήν μου ψυχήν
12.8	ποδίος τόπος ... κάλλος	om.
13.5	ἄλλ' εὐχαρίστει	ἄλλα μᾶλλον εὐχαρίστησον
13.5	—	ἡ φιλανθρωπία αὐτοῦ
18.5	—	οἵμοι φῶς τῶν ἐμῶν ὀφθαλμῶν
21.1	ἀπετάξατο καὶ αὐτὸς ἐν τῷ κοινοβίῳ	om.

21.2	καταλείγας	προσκυρώσας ἀπετάξατο καὶ αὐτὸς ἐν τῷ κοινοβίῳ
21.3	ἐπὶ τοῦ ἐδάφους περιοῦσα ἐτίθει	περιοῦσα ἔτι ἡ μακαρία ἐτίθη ἐπὶ τοῦ ἐδάφους
21.4	—	μετὰ τὴν τελείωσιν τῆς αὐτοῦ θυγατρὸς

An ε-exemplar was the source of the Latin translation BHL 2725. In a number of passages, ε offers noteworthy additions. For instance, in 8.7, after τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν μου, the author of the ε-redaction added:

λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ γέρων· καὶ τί θέλεις, ποιήσω σοι· τί βραδύνεις πρός τὴν σωτηρίαν; ἡ δὲ λέγει αὐτῷ· ἵνα κατανύξῃ σε ὁ Θεός σῶσαι τὴν ψυχήν μου καὶ ἀποθίξαι με καὶ δοῦναι μοι τὸ ἄγιον σχῆμα.

A few lines later, at the end of the chapter, after ἐξῆλθεν ὁ γέρων ἀπὸ τοῦ οἴκου, he added (8.10):

εἰπὼν σώζουσα σῶζε σεαυτήν, γύναι, μὴ συναπολεσθῆς τοῖς πράγμασι τοῦ πατρός σου.

Also the conclusion of the text is amplified (21.5):

εὐξώμεθα οὖν ἄπαντες οἱ τε ἀναγινώσκοντες καὶ οἱ ἀκροώμενοι, ἵνα ὁ φιλάνθρωπος θεὸς δώῃ ἡμῖν σύνεσιν καὶ κατάνυξιν ἐπὶ τῷ καλῶς πολιτεύεσθαι καὶ ἀρέσκειν τῷ δεσπότῃ Χριστῷ τῷ ἀληθινῷ ἡμῶν Θεῷ. Πρεσβείας τῆς παναγίας Δεσποίνης ἡμῶν τῆς Θεοτόκου καὶ ἀεὶ παρθένου Μαρίας καὶ αὐτῆς τῆς μεγάλης ταῦτης καὶ ἀγίας Εὐφροσύνης καὶ πάντων τῶν ἀγίων, αὐτῷ ἡ δόξα εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων. ἀμήν.

V appears to be in a higher stemmatic position than the other members of this group. For instance, the beginning of chapter 20 (εἰς οὓς τῶν ἀδελφῶν ... τοῖς οἰκτιρμοῖς σου) presents a peculiar version in S S1 F (G is missing a number of leaves and this passage is lost): θαύματα καὶ διδόντα ύπογραμμὸν σωτηρίας τοῖς βουλομένοις προστρέχειν τοῖς οἰκτιρμοῖς αὐτοῦ. V has the original sentence. S S1 F G seem to descend from a common model. See, for instance, 6.3 ἔξελθε: V, εἰσελθε S S1 F G; 9.1 δι' ἐρευνήσεις: διερευνήσας V, ἐρευνήσας S S1 F (def. G); 17.2 φόκονόμησεν tr. post ἡθέλησεν S S1 F (def. G); πάντα add. post κατ' ἐμὲ S S1 F (def. G).

The twelfth-century Sp presents a significantly reworked text. The author modified a huge number of sentences, mostly adding small details. For instance, at the end of chapter 16, after λέγει ὁ Παφνούτιος· ἐκέλευσας, the exemplars descending from δ have a unique addition: φύσει οὐκ ἀφῶ σε τὰς τρεῖς ἡμέρας. In Sp, this addition is amplified: φύσει, πάτερ τίμιε, οὐκ ἀφίσταμαι σου τὰς τρεῖς ἡμέρας, ἀλλ' ὡς ἐκέλευσας οὕτως καὶ ποιῶ. Many of Sp's additions seem to be just stylistic improvements. For instance, in 2.3 the text, including in the ε-witnesses, reads τὴν τοῦ ἀββᾶ πολιτείαν: the text in Sp has a more elaborate τὴν τοῦ τιμίου ἀγίου ἐκείνου ἀββᾶ θεάρεστον πολιτείαν; in 3.1, the text states that Euphrosyne was taught to read and write by her father καὶ τῇ λοιπῇ σοφίᾳ; in Sp the text adds καὶ συνέσει τοῦ θεοῦ. In 2.1 the author of the textual version in Sp added a detail after χρόνον: πάλιν ἐλθὼν ἐν τῇ μονῇ. Two more examples:

	rell.	S S1 V F G	Sp
5.2-3	ό ἀδελφὸς ... παιδῶν εἰπόντων	ό πεμφθεῖς εἰς τὸν οἶκον αὐτοῦ καὶ μηνύσας ἔμαθεν	ό πεμφθεῖς ἀδελφὸς εἰς τὸν οἶκον τοῦ κυροῦ παφνουτίου καὶ μηνύσας ἔμαθεν παρὰ τῶν παιδῶν
6.1	—	καὶ ὁ μοναχὸς ἔφη: καλὸς ὁ λογισμός· καὶ ἡ κόρη εἶπεν	ἔφη αὐτῇ ὁ μοναχός: καλὸς ὁ λογισμός σου ἔστιν καὶ παράξαι ὅπερ ἐνθυμῆσαι. λέγει αὐτῷ ἡ κόρη

Sp presents many better readings than those in S S1 V F G. In several cases, we may assume that these copies descend from a common, defective, ancestor. For instance, in 12.8, S S1 V F G lack ποῖος τόπος τὸ ἡλιόμορφον ἐκεῖνον ἔκρυψεν κάλλος, while Sp has it. In 8.3, in the list of the possible beneficiaries of Paphnutius' fortune, the other copies have an altered order and lack ξένοι and λελωβημένοι; Sp has the correct list. But on many occasions Sp's good readings are above δ, which requires a different explanation. For instance, in 3.3 δ lacks διέλαμπεν, but the word is found in Sp (and M). In 3.1 δ lacks ἀνθρώπινον, but not Sp (and M). In 12.7, all witnesses of δ lack τίς τὸν ἐμὸν λύχνον ἔσβεσεν, while Sp offers the correct version. This implies that the text in Sp, being an ε-copy, was contaminated at some point by a second model in a higher stemmatic position.

In a number of cases, Sp combines both readings, that in ε and that in the second model. In 19.4, ε reads τὸ ἄγιον αὐτῆς λείψανον with C, while α and κ offer τὸ τίμιον αὐτῆς λείψανον (in B and ζ the sentence is missing). Sp combines both attributes: τὸ τίμιον καὶ ἄγιον αὐτῆς λείψανον. In 1.7, the text reads προσενέγκας, while ε has καρποφορήσας. In Sp we have προσενέγκας χάριν καρποφορίας. In 16.1 (δι' ἡς καὶ ἐτελεύτησεν), β's witnesses have δι' ἡς καὶ ἀπέθανεν, while S S1 V F G offer τὴν ἐπιθάνατον. In Sp, we read τὴν ἐπιθάνατον δι' ἡς καὶ ἀπέθανεν. In 18.4 ἔβοια λέγων, we have an example of contamination and amplification. The other copies of ε simply have ἔλεγεν: Sp has ἔβοια ὁδυρόμενος καὶ θρηνῶν λέγων ταῦτα. A final example among many others: in 12.8 one of Paphnutius' lamentations reads ποῖον πέλαγος αἰχμάλωτον ἔχει τὸν βασιλικὸν χαρακτῆρα; the δ-class has: ποῖος βάρβαρος αἰχμάλωτον ἔχει τὸν βασιλικὸν χαρακτῆρα; Now, Sp combined the δ-reading with another in a higher stemmatic position:

ποῖον πέλαγος ἐν βυθῷ κατέχει τὸ φαῖνόν καὶ ὑπέρλαμπρον πρόσωπον, ποῖος βάρβαρος βασιλεὺς αἰχμάλωτον ἔχει τὸν τίμιον καὶ βασιλικὸν χαρακτῆρα;

Most likely, this second model belonged to an early stage of B's line of transmission. The example above already demonstrates this point: ἐν βυθῷ κατέχει τὸ φαινόν πρόσωπον is a variant uniquely found in B. Also in 13.4 καὶ νηστεύσαντες οἱ πατέρες τὴν ἔβδομάδα ηὔχοντο περὶ τούτου, Sp shares with B καὶ νηστεύσαντες τὴν ἔβδομάδα καὶ εὐξάμενοι πάντες. A few more examples from over thirty variants uniquely found in B and Sp:

	rell.	B Sp
5.6	ἐλθεῖν	σωθῆναι
7.11	λόγον	τὸ συμφέρον (τὰ συμφέροντά μοι Sp ) ἐξ αὐτῆς οὖν πέμψασα μετεστειλάμην σε
8.2	τὰ τῆς σαρκὸς πειρατήρια	τὴν τοῦ σώματος πύρωσιν B , τὴν τοῦ σώματός σου πύρωσιν καὶ πάντα τὰ τῆς σαρκὸς πειρατήρια Sp
9.7	τοῦ παλατίου	τοῦ παλατίου Θεοδοσίου
10.3	λέγει	ἀποκριθεῖσα λέγει
12.4	ἔρημοι	ἔρημοι τόποι
13.2	ἔλυπτήθη	πάνυ ἔλυπτήθη B , ἔλυπτήθη πάνυ Sp
17.3	ἄλλα	ἄλλὰ παρακαλῶ σε
20.2	—	σημεῖον

In any case, Sp seems to descend from an ancestor in a higher stemmatic position in regard to V S SI FG (= ε'). In several cases, the better readings of Sp are unlikely be explained with, or at least we lack evidence of, contamination with a model like B. See, for instance, 1.3 ὁ ἀνὴρ αὐτῆς: Sp, ὁ ἀνὴρ ε', ὁ παφνούνιος B; 1.7 ἀξιοῦται: Sp, ἡξιοῦτο ε', λέξας B; 4.4 ὥρας: Sp, ἡμέρας ε', om. B; 8.1 οὐκ ἀποτάσσεται: οὐκ ἀποτάσσει Sp, οὐκ ἀφῆσει B ε'.

The most interesting aspect of the Sp text is that it appears to be somehow related to the text preserved in an eleventh-century copy, of which only one folio survives (P4), incorporated into Paris, Coisl. 237, a codex once owned by the Monastery of Great Meteoron. The fragment contains little more than two chapters (12.4-14.5). In 12.7 Sp and P4 preserve τὸ ἐμὸν λύχνον ἔσβεσεν, while δ lacks the words. In 12.8 and 13.4, quoted above, the text in P4 coincides with that in Sp (and B). In 12.11, we have the same combination found in Sp: ταῦτα καὶ τὰ τοιαῦτα. This shows that already in the eleventh century, there existed a version with these readings found in Sp. In one noteworthy case, P4 clearly replicates the text of α: in 13.1 it has ἄλλ' εὗξαι ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ τοῦ ἀμαρτωλοῦ instead of β's περὶ ἐμοῦ τοῦ ἀμαρτωλοῦ τοῦ εὕξασθαι τῷ θεῷ (τοῦ εὕξασθαι πρὸς τὸν θεὸν ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ in Sp). In any case, fragment P4 is too short to reach sound conclusions as to its stemmatic position and to its relation with Sp.

Finally, fragment O1 (Ohrid 44), an annual menology written in the first half of the tenth century, is perhaps connected to Stoudios. It belongs to the δ-class: see, for instance, 1.2 ἦν δὲ: καὶ ἦν B δ O1; 1.3 ϕ: ϕ τινὶ δ O1; ἀποβίωσιν καλῶς C δ O<sub>I</sub>; 1.4 παρασχεῖν C δ O<sub>I</sub>. Within the δ-class, it seems most likely related to ε: see 1.3 αὐτῆς om. ε (non Sp) O<sub>I</sub>; αὐτῶν ἀποβίωσιν ε O<sub>I</sub>; 1.3 τὰ πράγματα αὐτῶν tr. post διοικοῦνται ε O<sub>I</sub>; 1.4 ἀναλίσκουσα ε O<sub>I</sub>. Unfortunately, the fragment is too short to provide further information. It comprises just a few lines of chapter 1 (1.1-4).

The other group of copies descending from δ is formed by M (s. X<sup>2</sup>), P (s. XI), V<sub>I</sub> (s. X ex.-XI in.), V<sub>2</sub> (s. XI in.), M<sub>I</sub> (s. X ex.), and V<sub>3</sub> (s. XI-XII), M<sub>2</sub> (s. XII ¼), and K (s. XII). I designate this group ζ. The texts are all menologies, with two exceptions: P and K are non-menological collections. They were all produced in southern Italy, except K, which is an Athonite copy. Against ε, ζ preserves the text of 12.8, ποῖος τόπος τὸ ἡλιόμορφον ἐκεῖνο ἔκρυψε κάλλος. A few more examples of variants of the lost common ancestor:

α κ B C ε	ζ
1.4 πάνυ οὖν πολλὰ (πολλὰ οὖν C , πολλά τε ε)	πάμπολλα
3.3 ἡ διάπλασις	τῆς διαπλάσεως
4.4 ἔκάστης	ἐφ' ἔκάστης
5.5 ἔρχεται ἐπὶ τὸ μονάσαι (θέλει ἐλθεῖν καὶ καθίσαι μεθ' ὑμῶν ε)	ἔλθῃ θέλων καθίσαι
5.8 ἔκαστος	ἔκαστος καὶ βαστάζει
13.4 εὐχάρις	om.
13.6 ὁ θεὸς	om.
17.3 τοῦτο ποίησον (σύστειλον αὐτό ε)	om.
17.4 τὸν τόπον τοῦτον (τὸ μοναστήριον ε)	τὸ κοινόβιον
20.2 τὸ γεγονός ἔλεγον	om.

M P V<sub>2</sub> V<sub>3</sub> descend from a common model (=ζ'). See, for instance, 6.1 πράγματα tr. post μάταια; 7.4 ἐκεῖ: ἐκεῖσε; 12.3 τις αὐτὴν (αὐτῇ V<sub>3</sub>) tr.; 13.1 τοῖς ποσὶ τοῦ ἀββᾶ: τῷ ἀββᾶ. The ancestor of this group of copies must have entered southern Italy prior to the mid-tenth century.

M shows traces of the interference of a second model. Most instances concern small omissions from its source. For instance, in 1.2 all representatives of γ lack the sentence καὶ πλουσίαν σφόδρα, except M, which has it. This exemplar must have been in a higher stemmatic position than δ. In 1.4 all copies of δ lack one sentence (ἐδέετο τοῦ Θεοῦ πληρωθῆναι τὴν δέησιν αὐτῆς). This is not the case of M. A few more examples:

α κ B C M	δ
1.5 τὰ πρὸς ἐπιθυμίαν	τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν
1.7 οὐκ ὀλίγα χρήματα ( om. κ)	οὐλίγα χρήματα
3.2 φύσεως	φύσεως ὡς καὶ εὐχῆς καρπός
3.3 πλατυτάτη ἐγένετο / πλατυτέρας γενομένης Α	πλατυτέρας διαδοθείσης
3.3 ὑπῆρχεν καὶ ἡ	om.
4.1 λοιπὸν	om.

P offers a few readings uniquely found in M. For instance: 10.5 ὑπερβαίνει; 14.1 διαρρεῖ τοῦ δέ τινος χρόνου; 18.5 νῦν add. post κάγῳ. But the evidence is fragile. V<sub>3</sub> shares some variants with P and M: for instance, 9.7 ἐπειδὴ add. ante ἡ πόλις; 9.7 τοῖς ἀσκηταῖς tr. post παρέχειν; 17.2 Εὐφροσύνης om. and 3 Εὐφροσύνη add. post εἰμι. Again the evidence is fragile.

A different model is represented by M<sub>1</sub>, V<sub>1</sub> and K (= ζ'). M<sub>1</sub> and V<sub>1</sub> offer the merging of two lines of transmission. Up to 13.7, they belong to the line of transmission of K, as shown by more than fifty variants. For instance, in 12.9, ἐκείνη τοῦ γήρως ἡ βακτηρία is missing in ζ', but the passage is present in K M<sub>1</sub> V<sub>1</sub>; in 13.1, τοῖς ποσὶ τοῦ ἀββᾶ is present in K M<sub>1</sub> V<sub>1</sub> against the simplified τῷ ἀββᾷ in ζ'; in 11.6 οἰκοδομεῖν, K M<sub>1</sub> V<sub>1</sub> have the unique reading οἰκοδομηθῆναι, against οἰκοδομεῖσθαι in δ. See also 13.1, λύπην for ὁδύνην (with B); 10.5 οὗτος om.; 12.4 πολλὴ (δ) om.

ζ' must have been contaminated with readings placed above δ. For instance, in 12.5 ε ζ' present ἀπετύγχανον while K M<sub>1</sub> V<sub>1</sub> offer the correct ἀπέπιπτον. In 12.8 ε' ζ' offer ποῖος βάρβαρος instead of the correct ποῖον πέλαγος, found in K M<sub>1</sub> V<sub>1</sub>. In 13.4, δ has καὶ νηστευσάντων αὐτῶν ἔβδομάδα καὶ εὐξαμένων πάντων instead of καὶ νηστεύσαντες οἱ πατέρες τὴν ἔβδομάδα ηὔχοντο περὶ τούτου, found in α, κ and B. K M<sub>1</sub> V<sub>1</sub> present καὶ νηστεύσαντες τὴν ἔβδομάδα πάντες, uniquely found in these three copies. In 13.7 σου post μόχθους is missing in δ, but not in K V<sub>1</sub> M<sub>1</sub>.

From 13.7, M<sub>1</sub> and V<sub>1</sub> descend from an ancestor common to V<sub>2</sub>, hereafter θ. This is shown by a large number of exclusive variants and errors. See a few examples:

	α κ B C ε P M V <sub>3</sub> K	θ

M, P and V<sub>3</sub> present a peculiar final section with two slightly different versions:

Θ offers a simpler version: εἰς δόξαν τοῦ Πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ Υἱοῦ καὶ τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων. ἀμήν, similar to that in K: εἰς δόξαν καὶ τιμὴν τοῦ Πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ Υἱοῦ καὶ τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος νῦν καὶ ἀεὶ εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων.

M<sub>1</sub> and V<sub>1</sub> have an almost identical text. A few examples of errors found exclusively in M<sub>1</sub> and V<sub>1</sub>:

14.1-2 καὶ πάλιν ὑπέστρεφεν ... εἰς τὸ κοινόβιον	om.
15.4 ὁ Θεός	κύριος πάτερ

V<sub>1</sub> does not seem to be a copy of M<sub>1</sub>. See 4.1 ἡσπάζετο: εἰσπάσατο V<sub>1</sub>, εἰς πάντας M<sub>1</sub>; 13.3 πάντες add. post ἐβδομάδα M<sub>1</sub> (not V<sub>1</sub>); 19.3 ἡμῖν: ὑμῖν M<sub>1</sub> (ἡμῖν in V<sub>1</sub>). No evidence proves that M<sub>1</sub> is a copy of V<sub>1</sub>, in case M<sub>1</sub> is not slightly earlier than V<sub>1</sub>.

Finally, the twelfth-century M<sub>2</sub>. It was also produced in southern Italy, perhaps Calabria. Only a portion of the first four chapters, from 1.7 ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ οὐκ ὄλιγα χρήματα to 4.6 καὶ ἤρξατο ἡ καρπός, survives. It clearly belongs to the δ-class (see, for instance, 3.2 ώς καὶ εὐχῆς καρπός), perhaps to family ζ (see 3.4 προφθάσαι). But the evidence is not enough to place it in the stemma confidently.

The relationships between the copies of the Vita Euphrosynae prior to the late twelfth century can roughly be represented as follows:

THE SYRIAC TRANSLATION IN SINAI, ST CATHERINE'S MONASTERY

As said above, Sinai, St Catherine Monastery, Syr. 30 contains a collection of lives of female saints translated from Greek into Syriac, copied by John the Styliste of Beth-Mari-Kaddisha, in Qanūn, near Antioch, in AD 778<sup>48</sup>. According to the translation by Anne Smith Lewis, its Greek model belonged to the β-class of manuscripts. In the tables on p. 27, it usually coincides with the β-readings. A few details suggest that, within the β-class, the model must have been a δ-exemplar: 1.4 ἐδέετο τοῦ Θεοῦ πληρωθῆναι τὴν δέησιν αὐτῆς om. δ Syr.; 2.4 ἔξαετοῦς δ Syr.; 3.2 ώς καὶ εὐχῆς καρπός δ Syr.; 3.4 τοῦ θεοῦ C δ Syr.; 4.10 τὰ ἑκάστου B δ Syr., τὰ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου C; 5.5 θέλει ἐλθεῖν C δ Syr.; 8.1 ἀδελφοὺς ἡ ἀδελφὰς δ Syr.; 8.4 τῷ πατρί σου γ Syr.; 8.7 κόρη γ Syr.; 16.7 φύσει οὐκ ἀφῶ σε τὰς τρεῖς ήμέρας δ Syr., λέγει αὐτῷ ὅτι οὐκ ἀφίσταμαι τὰς τρεῖς ήμέρας C; 17.1 ἐνστάσης οὖν τῆς τρίτης ήμέρας δ Syr.; 19.4 αἱ λαῦραι πᾶσαι δ Syr. (ἡ λαύρα πᾶσα C). In 7.2 the Syriac text presents the sentence equivalent to τί ἐσκύλθη ἡ θεοφίλεια σου πρὸς ήμᾶς κύρι ἀδελφέ found in C (a repetition of 9.6). No relevant characteristics of α or κ are present in the Syriac text.

EDITIONS

The first edition of the Greek text was printed in 1883, in the second volume of Analecta Bollandiana, pp. 195-205. It is based on the transcription of Paris, BnF, grec. 1454 made by Anatole Boucherie, who died shortly before its publication<sup>49</sup>. The manuscript belongs to the α class in our edition, conveying a fairly good text. This is the basis of all the studies and translations made so far, such as the Italian translation by Laura Franco<sup>50</sup>. Recently, a critical edition with a Spanish translation was published by Ángel Narro and Isabel Jesús Gallarte<sup>51</sup>.

EDITORIAL PROCEDURES

The present edition is based on all the manuscripts discussed above. The consensus of  $\alpha$ , in particular  $O$ , and the earliest manuscripts of  $\beta$  usually produces a reliable text. When there is no way of selecting a reading from the manuscript transmission and the readings are equally acceptable, I have preferred to give the  $\alpha$ -reading, for it usually seems to be less reworked than the witnesses of  $\beta$ . In the case of  $C$ , a representative of a line of transmission to which belonged the model of Translation B, I tried to present the large additional portions in an edited and more easily readable form in the apparatus criticus in order to make easy the match between the Greek text and the Latin equivalent. I preferred this solution to the alternative option, that is, to give this version of the text separately.

The twelfth-century  $S_1$ ,  $K$ ,  $M$ , and  $M_2$  are basically reworked versions, combining readings from different sources in addition to variants due to the author's own initiative and the errors due to the copyists' distraction. I decided to keep them in the apparatus criticus because, although they do not contribute to the reconstruction of the text, they witness peculiar textual versions in circulation within the chronological scope of our study. Additionally, this will help place manuscripts not considered in the present study. I have also included  $L$  in the apparatus criticus. Although it may derive from  $S_2$ , it has idiosyncratic details which may be of interest to the reader. As for  $M_1$  and  $V_1$ , see above.

Naturally, spellings vary immensely across this body of manuscripts, copied in different times, regions, and cultural and school contexts, often with implications for morpho-syntactical interpretation. In the text, I use the traditional orthography and accentuation system (as found, by the way, in Boucherie's edition). This is a pragmatic, and the best, solution to provide a readable text. In the apparatus criticus I eliminated all purely orthographical variants. They would have overburdened an already heavily charged apparatus, and they do not contribute to the reconstruction of the text or to its textual history. The exception is when I need to quote a single manuscript because it contains a meaningful variant: in this case, I give the form found therein, without correcting errors in spelling or accentuation. As for the movable  $v$ , I follow the earliest witness,  $O$ .

The division into chapters follows Boucherie's edition of the Greek text (Analecta Bollandiana, 2 (1883), pp. 195–205), and his edition of the Latin text, Translation A, Redaction 1 (Revue des langues romanes, 2 (1871)<sup>52</sup>). Each chapter was then divided into smaller numbered units, to facilitate the identification and referencing of particular words and sentences. The same division into units will be applied to the Latin versions. Sometimes, this causes an unexpected division of the Greek text, but it seemed preferable to achieve an agreement between texts, and thus make it easy to compare them.

In the apparatus criticus, the order of the sigla is, first, the  $\alpha$  copies (O A), then the  $\beta$  copies; within  $\beta$ , first  $\kappa$  (= S<sub>2</sub> L) B C, then  $\varepsilon$  (S S<sub>1</sub> V F G P<sub>4</sub> Sp O<sub>1</sub>) and  $\delta$  (M P V<sub>2</sub> V<sub>3</sub> M<sub>2</sub> K M<sub>1</sub> V<sub>1</sub>). When the variants between brackets are on the left-hand side of the Greek siglum, they concern the word or words immediately preceding the bracket. When the variants between brackets are given on the right-hand side of the Greek siglum, they correspond to the whole unit.

A last word about the apparatus biblicus. The author of this Vita used a Greek version of the Book of Tobit that contained three sentences not found in the available evidence and editions of the Greek Bible, but that were present in Jerome's source<sup>53</sup>. In this case, I indicate cfr Vulg. Tb in the apparatus.

TRANSLATION A OF THE «LIFE OF EUPHROSYNE», REDACTION I («BHL» 2722)

As early as the mid-eighth century, a particular redaction of a translation of the Vita Euphrosynae, modelled on an exemplar of the β-line of transmission of the Greek text, was circulating in Francia. It never achieved a significant manuscript transmission, unlike the version BHL 2723, our Translation B. The earliest extant witness is an early ninth-century manuscript produced for a female aristocratic audience, possibly linked to Troyes. In the following pages I shall first refer very briefly to the manuscripts used in the present study, before discussing the relations between them and the relation of this translation to its Greek model.

This is the earliest, and the best, witness of this version of the Vita Euphrosynae. Therefore, it deserves particular attention.

As pointed out by Martin Heinzelmann, M is an outstanding representative of the hagiographical production and transmission of hagiographical texts at the end of the Merovingian period. It presents many ancient redactions, and is the earliest extant witness for many of them<sup>2</sup>. The evidence suggests that the codex was designed for a female community headed by a high-ranking aristocrat. Bernhard Bischoff believed that the manuscript was produced in Lotharingia or northern Burgundy, and that some of the scribes exhibit marks of the early Metz style, the so-called «Angilram style». In contrast, considering the number of saints from Troyes, including some rare texts, Heinzelmann preferred placing its origins in a female community in the region of Troyes<sup>3</sup>. The history of the manuscript before its arrival in the Bouvier collection in Dijon is unclear<sup>4</sup>. Guglielmo Libri stated that the codex came from Saint-Étienne in Autun, but provided no source supporting this assertion<sup>5</sup>. Raymond Étaix considered that it came from Saint-Bénigne, Dijon<sup>6</sup>, and in-

The gatherings are usually ruled in thirty-three long lines. The exceptions are the seventh quaternion ruled in thirty-six lines (fols. 56-63), the ninth and the tenth in thirty-seven lines (fols. 70-85), and the eleventh quire in twenty-nine lines (fols. 86-93).

6. Étaix in Ronsin, La bibliothèque Bouvier cit. p. 238. Some have suggested that the manuscript was in Worms in the thirteenth century: for instance, E. de Stryker, Une ancienne deed, M was the «codex s. Benigni Divionensis pervetustus» used by Pierre-François Chifflet (1592–1682) to copy the Passio of Benignus of Dijon<sup>7</sup>.

Three sections can be identified. The first, corresponding to fols. 2r–142v, contains a Passionarium Apostolorum (fols. 2r–36v), followed by a collection of Vitae of confessores, all of them bishops related to Francia (fols. 36v–51r)<sup>8</sup>. Then, headed by the passiones of Pope Clement I and Pope Sylvester I, we have an assemblage of texts on female saints presented out of calendrical order (fols. 71v–142v): Agatha, Lucia, Euphemia of Chalcedon, Chrysanthus and Daria, and Gertrude, abbess of Nivelles<sup>9</sup>; the Nativitas sanctae Mariae genetricis dei, consisting of the first part the Protevangelium of James combined with the Evangelium of Pseudo-Matthew and other sources<sup>10</sup>, followed by Ps.-Melito of Sardis' Transitus Mariae<sup>11</sup>. Then we have more texts on female saints (fols. 101r–42v): Julia of Troyes<sup>12</sup>, Melanius of Troyes (a text in which the central figure is an un-

État de la question et perspectives nouvelles*, «Revue d'histoire des textes», 26 (1996), pp. 41–102, at p. 44. The reason for this proposal is the presence of a letter on fol. 143r, the first recto of a quire left blank, recording a conflict between a Prior and a Magister of Worms, mediated by Hugues, abbot of Saint-Bénigne of Dijon. As Martin Heinzelmann pointed out (Ein karolingisches Legendar cit., p. 211 n. 2), this piece of information more likely connects the manuscript to Dijon.

8. These are: Quentin of Vermandois, both the Passio and the Inventio (BHL 6999–7000), Vedast of Arras (BHL 8502), Dionysius, bishop of Paris (the so-called «ancient passio», BHL 2171), Remigius of Reims (BHL 7150), Paternus of Avranches (BHL 6477). named young girl from Troyes)<sup>13</sup>, Euphraxia of Egypt (BHL 2179), Thecla<sup>14</sup>, Marina of Antioch<sup>15</sup>, Euphemia of Chalcedon (BHL 2708c), Caecilia and her husband Valerianus<sup>16</sup>, Afra of Augsburg<sup>17</sup>, and finally Euphrosyne of Alexandria. Most headings include the feast day of each saint. It should be noted that the Passio Eugeniae is repeated: first, on fols. 76r-80v, we have BHL 2708; then, on fols. 122v-6v, BHL 2708c. This point indicates that the assemblage was made from the merging of different hagiographical collections.

The second section, fols. 143r-203v, consists of a set of seven quaternions signed from «A» onwards and a final ternion. They usually present the feast day in the titles. The first recto is left unused. The verso bears the monumental title of the Passio Eugeniae<sup>18</sup>, a similar display to that of the first text on the Virgin (Nativitas sanctae Mariae). This piece is at the head of a sequence of Passiones and Vitae, several of which concern female saints, arranged in calendrical order from 25 December to 13 February: Eugenia, Columba of Sens, Fructuosus, Augurius and Eulogius of Tarragona, Patroclus of Troyes, Speusippus, Eleusippus and Meleusippus venerated in Langres, Babylas of Antioch, Sabina of Troyes, Paula of Rome by Jerome<sup>19</sup>; then, the second part of the aforementioned Protevangelium of James combined with passages from Matthew and Luke (Acta sanctae Mariae matris domini Iheu Christi in templo) (BHL 5333m-n)<sup>20</sup>, Dorothea and Theophilus of Caesarea (BHL 2321), and Juliana of Nicomedia (BHL 4523). From here, the sequence of the texts does not follow the liturgical calendar: a set of Gallo-Roman saints (Marcellus of Paris, Privatus of Gévaudan (in Aquitania), Vincentius of Agen, Marcellus of Chalon, Ferreolus of Vienne), and a set of Roman and eastern martyrs (Christopher of Lycia, Luceia of Rome, Eleutherius of Rome)<sup>21</sup>.

The third section, fol. 204r-22v, begins with the Passio Romani et Barulae (BHL 7304). The display of the title is similar to that of the Nativitas sanctae Mariae and the Passio Eugeniae. Here we have Benignus of Dijon; Adrian of Nicomedia; Memorius of Troyes; Andochius, Thyrus and Felix of Autun; and Symphorian of Autun, truncated at the end<sup>22</sup>. The next, and last, folio (fol. 222) contains a portion of the Passio Reginae prope Alesiam (BHL 7092), a saint of Alise-Sainte Reine, Autun, a text possibly written in the eighth century<sup>23</sup>. With exception of Adrian, all the saints are linked to Burgundy and Troyes.

M, therefore, represents a large assemblage of Passiones and Vitae circulating in eighth-century Francia and northern Burgundy. A number of Vitae are related to Troyes: Julia, Melanius, Patroclus, Sabina, Memorius. Some of them are rare versions, such as those of Melanius and Memorius<sup>24</sup>. Several others are related to Burgundy<sup>25</sup>. Most interestingly, M presents many passiones and Vitae of female saints distributed in two main blocks: Agatha to Euphrosyne (fols. 71v-142v); Eugenia to Juliana, an assemblage in calendrical order, mixed with a few Vitae of male saints (fols. 143v-88v). Further Vitae of female saints are found outside these two blocks. The display of the Vita of Gertrude of Nivelles, followed by her Miracula, suggests a prominent place in this collection, as Monique Goullet pointed out<sup>26</sup>. Daughter of Pippin I, the first abbess of the monastery of Nivelles, in Austrasia, which had been founded by her mother Itta after her husband's death, Gertrude was a highly prestigious ancestor of Charlemagne's family. Furthermore, she was the first abbess of an important monastery. We can easily infer that female members of her family would have praised Gertrude with intense devotion<sup>27</sup>. Prominence is also given to the Virgin, with three texts (Nativitas, Assumptio, Purificatio) and to Eugenia. This last text is particularly significant for discussion of Euphrosyne. Daughter of the prefect of Egypt and belonging to the Roman senatorial society, Eugenia escapes from her worldly life and takes refuge in a monastery, of which she becomes a disguised «abbot». This is also the case of Euphraxia and, of course, of Euphrosyne, whose Vita closes the first block of female saints. As is often the case, the copy of the Vita Euphrosynæ does not present a feast day. As we shall see, this copy was extensively emended in the following centuries.

As Fernand Peloux suggested to me, the presence of Privatus in this manuscript may also connect it to Burgundy: he was martyred by Chroesus, who was active in Langres, not far from Troyes; cfr. G. Bardy, Recherches sur un cycle hagiographique. Les martyrs de Chroesus, «Revue d'histoire de l'Église de France», 21/90 (1935), pp. 5-29. The script of the manuscript, a mid-ninth-century Visigothic, exhibits traces of Carolingian influence. This led Antonio Linage Conde to place its origins in eastern Iberia. It belonged to D. Gaspar de Guzmán, Conde-Duque of Olivares, a high-ranking figure, passionate bibliophile and close collaborator of Felipe III and Felipe IV<sup>29</sup>. He may have obtained the book in the Aragonese and Catalan territories in 1626, when he accompanied Felipe IV to attend the cortes, held in Aragón in that year<sup>30</sup>. On this occasion, Guzmán acquired a huge amount of medieval manuscripts from various sources, such as libraries of reputed scholars (like that of Jerónimo Zurita, which at the time was held in the Carthusian monastery of Aula-Dei and had been since 1571), the chapter of the church of Santa María del Pilar, the monasteries of Santa María de Poblet, Monserrat, San Juan de la Peña, Veruela, and Montearagón, among others. One year later, in 1627, a catalogue of Guzmán's library was compiled by Lucas de Alejos. Our manuscript is recorded in this catalogue, number 1117<sup>31</sup>. It is not possible to identify the library from which Guzmán acquired it. When he died, his library passed to his nephew, Luis Méndez de Haro (1603-1661), who eventually bequeathed it to his son Gaspar de Haro y Guzmán, Marquis of Heliche (1629-1687). In 1654, the Marquis of Heliche donated more than a thousand codices to Felipe IV for the library of El Escorial, among them our manuscript<sup>32</sup>.

Then comes the Vita Euphrosynae (fols. 160r-73r), followed by the Vita Marinae, dictae Marini (BHL 5528, fols. 173r-7r), excerpts of Palladius' Historia Lausiaca, mostly concerning stories of women or related to women<sup>37</sup>, Caesarius of Arles' sermon De decem virginibus and Gregory the Great's homily In natale s. Sebastiani (fols. 190r-201v)<sup>38</sup>, and other excerpts from the Vitae Patrum.

The Vita Euphrosynae presents a peculiar configuration: chapters 1-4 (until 4.22 et satis placuit animae suae) belong to Translation A, and the rest to Translation B, in a version close to Munich Clm 6382, Part I, a manuscript produced in Reims (see below). Therefore, at some stage of the textual transmission prior to the mid-ninth century, a scribe disposed of two models, one containing the first four chapters, the other required to complete the first.

s. X 2/4, Córdoba (?); 28.5 × 22 cm; two columns of 24/29 long lines; owner: Sant Climent de Codinet (?); Cathedral of Urgell (s. XI)<sup>42</sup>.

According to Manuel Díaz y Díaz, this manuscript, also known as Codex Miscellaneus Patristicus, was probably written in Córdoba in the second quarter of the tenth century, as the colophon on fol. 152r indicates, and was produced for a female monastery. It is unknown when the codex was taken to Catalonia<sup>43</sup>.

The manuscript is composed of three parts. Part I (fols. 1-48, quires signed «III» to «VIII») contains Gregory the Great's Dialogorum libri IV, truncated at the beginning and at the end. Part II (fols. 49r-152v, signed «I» to [«XIII»]) presents Paschasius of Dume's Geronticon (truncated at the beginning), and excerpts of Martin of Braga's Sententiae Patrum Aegyptiorum<sup>44</sup>. Part II is written in a very similar hand, if not the same hand, that copied the first part, and presents a colophon dated 30 October 938, stating that presbyter Isidore copied the manuscript at the request of abbess Gundisa (fol. 152r).

Part III (fols. 153-237) is a set of quaternions numbered from «I» to «X» and a final ternion. It contains an assemblage of homilies and excerpts of ascetic literature for a monastic audience. The first text is the famous «Sunday Letter», Recension I, a letter supposedly sent by Christ to Jerusalem, already known in Spain in the sixth century<sup>45</sup>. The textual version is close to that published by Étienne Baluze from a lost codex of Tarragona<sup>46</sup>. At the end, af-

The codex contains Gregory the Great's Dialogorum libri IV (fols. 1-119v). At the end, the same hand copied the Vita Euphrosynae, entitled Victa beata Castissima (corrected to Vita beatae Castissimae) (fols. 119-25v)<sup>50</sup>.

The colophon of Paschasius' Liber Geronticon is found on fol. 152r, and the verso was left unused. The «Sunday letter» is found on fol. 153r, the first words being omnem anima niuibem in carne. On fol. 152v, a different hand wrote the beginning of the text: In nomine Domini incipit epistola Salvatoris Domini nostri, Iesu Christi filii Dei, qui (i.e. quae) in Ierosolimis cecidit, Micael oibsam deportabit ..., up to et post haec crebit omnis peccatus in terra donec misi dilubium et dilu-, the last word being truncated. s. XI, 1 fol., 34 × 27 cm; owner: abbey of Einsiedeln<sup>51</sup>.

This folio, which originally appears to have been the last of a codex, was attached to a volume gathering many fragments. The recto contains the Vitae Euphrosynae from 18.5 o mea filia dulcissima to the end. The verso was left unused. A later hand added, twice, a familiar definition of death (mors dicta est a morsu quia per morsum Adae mors intravit in orbem).

The manuscript was written at the abbey of Fécamp. The Vita Odilonis by Jotsald of Cluny (BHL 6281; fols. 21r-5r), followed by a poem on Odilo (BHL 6283f, fol. 25r), indicates that the manuscript was produced after 1 January 1049, when Odilo died. The poem on Odilo is followed by another honouring William of Volpiano, abbot of Saint-Bénigne of Dijon and, later, the first abbot of Fécamp (†1031)<sup>53</sup>.

This legendary per circulum anni is severely damaged, and in several places only fragments of the leaves survive. In its present state, it begins on 31 December (Vita Silvestri Papae, BHL 7739) and goes up to 13 August (Vita Radegundis, BHL 7048), after which follows a set of Vitae of various dates. ingly, the legendary contains several texts usually found in ascetic and monastic contexts: Antonius' Vita Simeonis Stylii (BHL 7957; fols. 25v-26v), the Vita Mariae Aegyptiacae (BHL 5417; fol. 59r), the Vita Pachomii iunioris (BHL 6412; fol. 64r-v), Evagrius' translation of Athanasius' Vita Antonii eremite (BHL 609; fols. 96r-101r). Only one folio containing the Vita Euphrosynae survives (fol. 16r-v). It comprises almost a half of the text, from 4.3 et timore dei to 13.6 pro hoc dominus<sup>54</sup>. It is impossible to prove where the folio was originally situated in the anthology and whether the title presented the feast day.

This small-format legendary has lost several leaves<sup>56</sup>. The Vita Euphrosynae is its first text (fols. 1r-1iv), followed by the Vita Iuliani ep. Cenomannensis (BHL 4544), the Vita Abrahae et Mariae in Hellesponto (BHL 12), and the Vita Marinae, dictae Marinus (BHL 5528). The anthology includes saints from northern France (Justus of Beauvais, Firminus of Amiens, Solemnis of Chartres, Paternus of Avranches) alongside Melanius of Troyes, also present in Montpellier H 55, and in the same version as in Rouen U. 3 (BHL 5891, see above)<sup>57</sup>. The Vita Euphrosynae presents the title Vita sanctae Eufrosinae uirginis quae interpretatur in latinum Castissima, as in Montpellier H 55. The liturgical date precedes the title: Kalendis Ianuarii.

This legendary, composed in Benediktbeuern, does not strictly follow the calendrical order. It begins on 1 January with the Vita Basillii (BHL 1023; fols. 1r-13r), which is followed by the Vita Pachomii (BHL 6410; fols. 13r-38r)<sup>59</sup> and the Vita Euphrosynae (fols. 38r-42r). s. XV; 6 fols.; owners: Gaspar de Guzmán, Conde-Duque de Olivares (1587-1645) (1626); Real monasterio de San Lorenzo de El Escorial (1654)<sup>69</sup>.

The Vita Euphrosynae is found on the final quire of a late twelfth-century codex containing Gregory the Great's Dialogorum libri IV, owned by the monastery of San Juan de la Peña, in Aragon. It was copied by a fifteenth-century hand.

THE TRANSMISSION OF THE TEXT

The earliest surviving witness of Translation A, Redaction 1, is M (Montpellier, H 55), a manuscript copied around 800 in Lotharingia or northern Burgundy, possibly connected to Troyes. The grammatical and orthographic features of the text suggest that the scribe's model was a pre-Carolingian exemplar. This is in keeping with many other texts copied in the manuscript, as pointed out by Martin Heinzelmann, who concluded that many of them stem from Merovingian models<sup>70</sup>. M presents the original name of the heroine in the title: Vita sanctae Eufrosinae qui interpretatur in Latino Castissima. This title is also found in the early twelfth-century D, and was probably in the late eleventh-century Ro, a copy very closely related to D, as we shall see below. In the text, the name is always Castissima. In all other copies, the name in the title, and in the text, is Castisima.

Some details suggest that M contained some errors and small changes. Considering all manuscripts used in the present edition, these include:

Greek text	R Es (18.5-21.5) P E (1.1-4.3) U (1.1-12.2) Ba Ro (4.3-13.6) D	M
3.4 πάντων διενοχλούντων	omnibus autem petentibus eam	omnibus autem pa- rentibus eis
4.1 λαβών αὐτὴν ὁ πατήρ αὐτῆς	duxit illam pater suus	duxit illam
4.1 πάνυ πολλὰ ἀγαθὰ ἀπενέγκας	et portauerunt munera multa	om.
8.5 ὅτι ἀγωνίσασθαι ἔχω	certare habeo	cerne habeo
9.2 πεντακόσια	quingentos	quinquaginta

In these examples, all other copies are closer to the Greek text than M. The table also shows that no other manuscript is a copy of M.

70. See above.

M was extensively emended by an eleventh-century hand (*M*²). It is difficult to identify the model used by the corrector, if there was another model involved in the operation. Many corrections coincide with a β-exemplar, perhaps with a model close to R Es P, but generally they are simple emendations, not necessarily extracted from a different model.

It is difficult to establish the relations between the surviving copies accurately. Four of them – E, Ro, U, and Es – only offer portions of the text. Most of them are late copies and present very reworked textual versions. Nevertheless, we can point out a few elements.

Two copies are related to M: Ro and D. Of the original copy in Ro (Rouen 1400 (U. 3)), a legendary written at the abbey of Fécamp in the second half of the eleventh century, only one folio survives, containing less than half of the text (4.3-13.6). Fortunately, we have D (Paris lat. 5666), an early twelfth-century legendary produced in northern France. It is a copy of Ro's model, if not of Ro itself. It presents every single variant and error found in the surviving portion of Ro<sup>71</sup>. This permits us to determine, with a certain degree of assurance, the text missing in Ro.

Only D (the text in Ro is lost) offers precisely the same title as we find in M: vita sanctae Eufrosinae quae interpretatur in latino Castissima. See some common variants:

	Greek text	E (1.1-4.3) R Es (18.5-21.5) P U (1.1-12.2) Ba	M D ( Ro def. )
1.5	οἱ ἀνὴρ αὐτῆς	uir suus	maritus suus
3.1	ἡ μήτηρ αὐτῆς ὑπεξῆλθεν τὸν ἀνθρώπινον βίον	mater eius migrauit de hac luce	contigit genetricem suam de hac luce migrasse
13.7	–	initium certaminis (cfr. BHL 1640)	initum certaminis (certamen D )
20.3	–	omnes	toti

The other manuscripts seem to descend from a common exemplar, hereafter β. The two Bavarian copies, R (Munich clm 14798), from the second half of the ninth century, whose origins are connected to the abbey of Regensburg, and P (Munich, clm 4531), a mid-twelfth-century legendary from Benediktbeuern, and the fragmentary eleventh-century Es, owned by Einsiedeln abbey, present an almost identical text. This is demonstrated by a huge amount of variants exclusively found in R and P, and in the surviving portion of Es. A few examples:

71. In a very few places, D has a better reading than Ro: 7.6 ei: D, illi R P U, om. Ro; 9.4 uenit om. Ro, intrat scr. sup. lin.; 11.4 retrudas: D, recludamus R P, recludam U, recludas Ro; 11.6 in retrusione: D, in reclusione Ro; 13.3 dominus: D, om. Ro P. But these are insufficient to prove, beyond any reasonable doubt, that D is not a copy of Ro.

	M E (1.1-4.3) U (1.1-12.2) Ba Ro (4.3-13.6) D	R Es (from 18.5) P
1.1	et continentiam	sine intermissione
2.4	nominavit illam	uocauit nomen eius
3.3	de ipsa infantula	illius
7.1	hoc narrabant / narrarent	haec inter se confabularentur
7.9	tu scis domine	deus testis est
8.3	et reliquam piam dispensationem	om.
11.1	multis fecit inimicus scandalum in anima pro forma eius	multos faciebat inimicus peccare in forma eius
12.3	aut quis seduxit illam	om.
12.9	ipsa erat laboris ... meorum eleuatio	om.
12.11	circumstantes amici et illi	om.
19.3	non obliuiscas	rogo ut non obliuiscas
19.4	et cum grandi	et cum magna
19.5	mirantes / admirantes Ba	uidentes
20.1	apertus est et / inluminatus est Ba	om.
20.2	dicebant	clamauerunt
21.1	dispersit	distribuit

The redaction found in R, Es and P is prior to the mid-ninth century. It was simplified, and many details reworked in a sort of synonymous style bringing no significant changes (such as pater eius / pater suus, and ad illum / ad eum). A few details may suggest that P is not a copy of R. See, for instance, 7.2 lucre: lucreris P D Ro, locares R; 7.3 cum gaudio (om. R). But this conclusion is very far from being unequivocal. Indeed, the evidence is extremely scarce. Es is too short to be establish whether it is a descriptus of R.

U (La Seu d'Urgell 604), produced in the second quarter of the tenth century, possibly in Córboda, seems to belong to the line of transmission of R Es P. It offers little more than the first eleven chapters. A few common variants:

	M E (1.1-4.3) Ba Ro (4.3-13.6) D	R Es (18.5-21.5) P U (1.1-12.2)
1.3	exitum	obitum
1.4	maerore	dolore
2.1	frequentabat	frequentaret
4.3	receptionem	susceptionem
4.4	commorassent	demorassent
5.3	introducere ipsum monachum	ipsum monachum introducere ad se
5.4	trecenti quinquaginta et duo sunt serui dei	centum quinquaginta sunt et duo serui dei
7.6	in scamno	om.
10.2	ordinem monasticum	ordinem monasterii

E (El Escorial I-III-13) is a mid-ninth-century assemblage of monastic and ascetic works, written in a Visigothic script showing Carolingian influence, possibly in the Catalan territories. It offers the first four chapters of Translation A, Redaction 1. As said above, the scribe (or an earlier scribe in the chain of transmission) had two different models, one containing Redaction 1, the other Translation B. It is likely that the first four chapters of E belong to the line of transmission of R Es P U, although the evidence is not definitive. In any case, see, for instance, 1.3 dum dinitia erat illi: dum dinitiae erant illi D, dum dinitiae illi multae erant Ba, dum diues erat ille E U, quia diues erat ualde R, quia ualde diues erat P; 1.6 abbas uir sanctissimus erat: abbas sanctissimus erat M, abbas (om. E) habitans uir sanctissimus erat (om. E) E U, abba uir sanctus habitans erat (habitabat P) R P. The first four lines in the table above (1.3, 1.4, 2.1, 4.3) suggest that E descends from an exemplar above the common model of R Es P U. Its brevity, however, prevents us from establishing its exact position relative to R Es P U.

Ba (Barcelona, BU 487), an eleventh-century codex containing Gregory the Great's Dialogi, owned by an unidentified monastery in the Catalan region before entering the Cathedral of Girona, is a heavily reworked version. It was emended by a much later hand using a dark brown ink (Ba 2). This version preserves a number of good readings against R Es P U, as shown by the table above. But it must descend from an ancestor common to the ancestor of R Es P U. See, for instance:

	Greek text	M Ro (4.3-13.6) D	R Es (18.5-21.5) P U (1.1-12.2) Ba
4.5	oi ἄνθρωποι	homines	omnes
12.2	—	dicens in se ipso / maledicens in corde suo in se ipsum M	in semetipso dicens
16.5	—	pro illa	om.
18.3	—	hodie	om.
18.6	—	tenebrae M / tenebrarum D	om.
20.2	ὑπογραμμούς	monimen M, monumentum D	hominem

In any case, the evident is scarce.

Finally, a few words about the other three, much later, copies. The fifteenth-century El Escorial Q-III-10, Part II is simply a copy of Ba. Valenciennes 168 (160), of the late thirteenth century, is a reworked version of the text of M, contaminated with a β-exemplar. The fifteenth-century Berlin Magdeburg 26 derives from an exemplar of the β-redaction.

The relationships between copies of Translation A, Redaction 1, prior to the thirteenth century can roughly be represented as follows<sup>72</sup>:

THE GREEK SOURCE

By the mid-eighth century, at the latest, the Latin translation A was circulating and being copied in Francia. The earliest extant witness of this particular redaction, as said above, was a passionary containing many Merovingian textual versions.

The source of this translation was an exemplar belonging to the β-class of the Greek textual transmission. Indeed, to give a couple of examples, it offers the number of monks found in β (5.4), and Agapius is called sapientissimum seruum Dei, corresponding to ἄνδρα λόγιον of the β-class, not ἄνδρα ἄγιον, typical of the α-class (10.4). On the other hand, the Greek exemplar must be in a high stemmatic position, above the γ family. For instance, Translation A preserves 13.1 pro peccatore found both in α and in S2 L of the β-class, which was lost in the γ-exemplar. Additionally, if we look at the γ group of manuscripts, we see that this translation could not derive from any of the main redactions (B, C, δ). For instance, in 18.4, the Latin text reads irruens super faciem filiae suae, corresponding to ἐπιπεσών τῷ ἀγίῳ αὐτῆς προσώπῳ, while B has ἐπιπεσών τῷ ἀγίῳ αὐτῆς λειψάνῳ. In 17.5, the Latin translation has oret pro mea paupertate, corresponding to εὔχον ύπὲρ τῆς ταπεινώσεώς μου in all of the Greek textual transmission, while B (and C) reads εὔξαι ύπὲρ ἐμοῦ. Nor

72. In the absence of material evidence which would prove beyond any reasonable doubt the connection of a copy to its model, I represent P, Es, and D as descending from the model of R and that of Ro, although they may be descripti of R and Ro.

does the translation stem from an exemplar from which C descends. All the numerous additions and rewording in C are absent from the translation. Finally, the source of Translation A did not belong to the δ-class. In 2.4, the Latin text says that Euphrosyne was baptised at the age of seven, not six as in δ; in 8.1, it has no text corresponding to the addition ἡ ἀδελφάς, a feature of δ; in 17.1 it does not have the addition typical of δ.

In sum, the source of Translation A was an exemplar produced prior to the mid-eighth century, at the latest, and since lost. It belonged to the β-line of transmission in the branch from which the γ-class of manuscripts derives, but in a stemmatic position higher than γ.

THE TRANSLATOR'S TECHNIQUE

The Latin translation is mostly ad verbum. This method did not stop its author from reworking the text, simplifying and adding details that he thought might be useful to his audience. For instance, in chapter 6, when Euphrosyne deals with the issue of the tonsure, the author of the Latin version explains: dum in Oriente consuetudo est monachas tondere capillos sicut et viros<sup>73</sup>. In 4.3, the abbot invites Paphnutius and his daughter to spend a few days at the monastery: καὶ ἐκέλευσεν αὐτὴν καταλῦσαι ἐν τῷ ξενοδοχείῳ τοῦ κοινοβίου. The translator rendered ἐν τῷ ξενοδοχείῳ with a periphrasis: et iussit abbas foras de monasterio, ubi peregrini receptionem habebant, manere patrem cum puella.

Sometimes, the translator gives his text a more emotional tone. In 15.3-4, the Greek source has:

The translator introduces a pathetic voice:

In other places, he simplified the text. For instance, in 1.6, the Greek texts reads:

73. The prohibition against female tonsure was established in the Council of Gangra in Pa-phlagonia around the year 340 (can. 17), and was reiterated fifty years later, in 390, in the Theodosian Code (16.2.27).

Καὶ δὴ ἀπέρχεται ἐν τινὶ κοινοβίῳ, ἐνῷ ἐλέγετο τὸν ἡγούμενον μέγαν ἄνθρωπον παρὰ τῷ θεῷ τυγχάνειν.

This the translator condenses to:

Et in una die ambulauit in monasterio, ubi abbas uir sanctissimus erat.

EDITIONS

The present redaction of the Vita Euphrosynae was published for the first time in 1871 by Anatole Boucherie<sup>74</sup>. Boucherie transcribed the text found in M (Montpellier H 55), and produced an extensive linguistic commentary on the language of this particular copy. The linguistic analysis was his primary interest, being a reputed linguist.

More recently, in 2006, Joseph Reisdoerfer made available online an edition of M, supplemented with substantial additional material<sup>75</sup>. Other than an introduction to the contents and reception of the Vita, Reisdoerfer accompanied the text with an apparatus criticus in which he incorporated the variants found in Rouen 1400 (U. 3) and Valenciennes 168 (160). This apparatus criticus is followed by an apparatus of the emendations in M, an apparatus grammaticus et lexicographicus, an apparatus of biblical sources, and an apparatus of realia. He also provided a French translation. Reisdoerfer's work is a significant achievement, and provides important elements. But we should be aware that what we have here is basically a transcription of M. Every error, orthographic feature, often due to the usage of the scribe or his predecessors, and even every lacuna in the text is presented to the reader. The correct readings that are found in the two later witnesses he used are given in the apparatus criticus. Reisdoerfer also published a transcription of Valenciennes 168 (160) and of the fragment of Rouen, and a linguistic study of the text found in M<sup>76</sup>.

EDITORIAL PROCEDURES

The present edition is based on all of the surviving manuscripts identified so far produced prior to the late twelfth century. Later copies do not bring anything substantial to the reconstruction of the text, and therefore are not considered here. The Greek source usually helps select the preferable reading, whenever there is a divergence between α and β.

Orthography and morphology are important issues in the present case: we have in M a text full of linguistic features of a late antique, likely Merovingian, model. This is precisely what drew Anatole Boucherie's attention to M, and led him to produce a comprehensive linguistic commentary. More recently, this aspect was reiterated by Joseph Reisdoerfer<sup>77</sup>.

The existence of this copy is a challenge for the editor. In fact, it is always difficult to be sure whether the sorts of linguistic features found here go back to the author of the translation, or whether they belong to a certain model in the chain of transmission. The question for the editor is whether the non-classical linguistic features of one particular copy (namely the earliest) should be preferred, because they may better represent an earlier stage of the text. If so, the linguistic characteristics of the other manuscripts (in our case, the second earliest manuscript was copied some fifty years later) should be disregarded. Actually, late antique and early medieval intellectual agents, particularly in the period prior to Charlemagne's policy of the unification of school and writing, did not give the same value to orthography and other linguistic features as we do today. Considerable variation in grammatical and spelling usages coexisted. It was simply not an issue or a concern for the agents of the transmission.

Thus, considering that we cannot be sure to what extent M represents the orthography of the initial stage of the text – and M contains errors in several places, which means that it is no more than a piece in the transmission chain – and considering the diversity of spelling in the manuscripts, originating from different usages, schools, and chronological periods, I adopted a uniform and pragmatic approach. I chose to use the standard orthography as found in the TLL, MLW, and other normative dictionaries. It is pointless to try to recover the orthography of this seventh- or early eighth-century text in its earliest, or any other, phase. On the other hand, trivial variations in spelling, such as elael, nm/mm, np/mp, mpt-, nl/l, -ci/-ti-, adf-/aff-, adp-/app-, ads-/ass-, adm-/amm-, adn-/ann-, adl-/all-, final -d/-t, among others, have not been considered, since they provide no useful information about the history of the text and the stemmatic relationships between copies, and do not help to reconstruct the text. Instead, hypercorrection (like aecclisia), an erroneous initial b (or its absence when it is expected), and substitutions such as b/u, p/b, pb/f, i/y, o/u, and e/i, have been recorded in the apparatus criticus, since they may indicate an older, pre-Carolingian or Visigothic model, and in the cases where they could be interpreted as morphological variants. I always record the orthographical variants of proper names and Greek words. The spelling of the names of the protagonists is Pafnutius and Eufrosina in the early textual tradition and I decided to maintain these forms.

Regarding morpho-syntactical aspects, an important issue when working with a manuscript such as M – for instance, in monasterio / in monasterium with verbs of movement, often insignificant details to the medieval reader –, I have kept the non-classical constructions in M whenever they appear in other witnesses of  $\alpha$  and in the earliest witnesses of  $\beta$ . If these features are found in the earliest and most representative witnesses, they are likely to go back to early stages of the text. When there is no way of knowing which reading is preferable because they are equally possible, I usually followed the earliest manuscript, occasionally obtaining some support from the Greek text and the other redaction of the same translation, this is, the Vita Castissimae.

A final detail, also relating to M. As said previously, many emendations are made in an eleventh-century hand using a different, lighter, ink. Whenever it is clear that the emendation belongs to this hand and ink, I indicate this with M<sup>2</sup>. Erasures or small strokes emending mostly letters, such as closing a u into an o, impossible to characterise, are indicated with M p.c.. A good example can be seen in 13.1: M has ambolabat, which a corrector (M p.c.) altered to ambulauit (as given by all other manuscripts), and the hand M<sup>2</sup> wrote perrexit above the line.

P presents a text very similar to that in R. But it is not certain that P is a copy of R. After some hesitation, I decided to include P in the apparatus criticus. At the very least this provides the reader with this twelfth-century textual form, with its idiosyncratic variants and errors. The same applies to Es and D. In the case of D, the manuscript provides the full text, whereas Ro presents only a portion of the text. Therefore, it represents the missing text in Ro.

For the sake of clarity, the division of the text into chapters and units follows the division used in the Greek text<sup>78</sup>.

78. The translator did not include 2.3; 14.8 is found between 14.5 and 14.6, and 14.7 is divided in two parts, 14.7b before 14.8, 14.7a before 14.9.

TRANSLATION B OF THE «LIFE OF EUPHROSYNE» («BHL» 2723)

The Vita sanctae Euphrosynae, in the version classified BHL 2723, is found today in more than one hundred manuscripts. It was modelled on a lost exemplar of a line of transmission represented today by C (Paris, gr. 1538), a non-menological anthology copied in the late tenth century. The version transmitted by C is a reworked redaction with substantial rephrasing and a large number of additions, particularly in chapters 15 and 16, supplemented with quotations of the Gospel. Translation B is again a translation ad verbum. A few general features characterise this Latin version: other than the additions to chapters 15 and 16, the origins of the monk who tonsured Euphrosyne are omitted, the name of Euphrosyne's tutor is given as Agapitus, and the regions where they search for Euphrosyne are Alexandria and Egypt, not the original Egypt and Libya.

The translation must have existed prior to the mid-eighth century. Although the earliest Latin witnesses date from a few decades later, study of the manuscript transmission reveals that it was already circulating and being copied before the earliest surviving copy. From the beginning of its circulation, it travelled in anthologies of ascetic literature. Frequently, it is paired with the Latin versions of the so-called Vitae patrum, a collection of Greek saints' lives and episodes of various natures and configurations, transmitted to the west in the sixth century. These Vitae achieved immense popularity by the ninth century in the Carolingian cultural centres<sup>1</sup>. More specifically, it travelled with the Vitae of other female saints belonging to a sort of répertoire of Christian heroines, mainly addressed to a female audience: Eugenia, Pelagia, two Marinas (one also called Marinus, the other also called Margarita), Thais, Euphrasia, Mary of Egypt, among others. All of them are women who refused the conventions of contemporary society and devoted themselves to an ascetic life.

Below I first present the manuscripts used in the critical edition, all produced prior to the end of the tenth century, before dealing with the history of the textual transmission and its relation to the Greek source.

THE MANUSCRIPTS

1. Würzburg, Universitätsbibliothek, M.p.th.q. 26 (= W)

s. VIII-IX, Würzburg; 62 fols.; 20.5 × 18 cm; 26/27 and 22/23 long lines; owner: Würzburg, St Kilian Cathedral (shelf marks: «CLXIII», s. XV)<sup>2</sup>.

This manuscript, owned by St. Kilian Cathedral, was produced in the late eighth century in the region of Würzburg, at a scriptorium under Anglo-Saxon influence. It contains a collection of ascetic texts. The first quires (five quaternions and one bifolio), fols. 1-42v, labelled <A> to F, ruled in 26/27 long lines, contain a commentary to the Canticum Canticorum (with an excerpt of Apponius' commentary)<sup>3</sup>, and Jerome's Vita Malchi (BHL 5190), followed by his epist. 14, Ad Heliodorum monachum (CSEL 54, pp. 44-62). The last verso is left blank. The next quires, fols. 43r-62v (a ternion, a quaternion, and a ternion), labelled G to <I>, ruled in 22/23 long lines, contain Pseudo-Melito's Acta Iohannis apostoli (BHL 4320) and the Vita Euphrosynae (fol. 52r-61r). Fol. 61v and fol. 62 are left blank.

This well-known codex was, most likely, commissioned by a high-ranking female aristocrat or, at least, intended for an aristocratic female audience. Steven Stofferahn's thorough study gathers the available evidence and describes the current hypotheses about the origins and early history of the codex<sup>5</sup>. It was written in an unidentified scriptorium in northern Francia, in the ornamental Corbie a-b script<sup>6</sup>. The presence of Claudius of Turin's commentary on Genesis led Michael Gorman to date its origins after 811, maybe in the 820s<sup>7</sup>. The route it took to arrive to Essen remains uncertain. Stofferahn summarises the two main lines of conjecture proposed by modern scholarship. One concerns the links between Corbie and related centres to the Saxon monastery of Werden, founded by the Frisian missionary Liudger (742-809)<sup>8</sup>, and then the connection between Werden and Essen<sup>9</sup>. Another possibility is Rosamond McKitterick noted that the beginnings of the scriptorium at Essen, in the late ninth or early tenth century, may have required scribal training and an initial endowment of books from Werden. D could have been one of the books of that original endowment. that the manuscript is connected to Altfrid (c. 800-874), bishop of Hildesheim (851-874), who, just one year after his rise to the see of Hildesheim, founded the Essen convent on his family's lands and installed his sister, Gertrude, as abbess. Altfrid could have acquired the book on one of his trips to northern Francia. Whatever his route may have been, Stofferahn suggested that the codex arrived at Essen sometime in the 860s or 870s<sup>10</sup>.

It contains a large assemblage of excerpts of biblical commentaries, lives of saints and hymns, and works of Augustine. First, on fols. 1v-239v, we have excerpts of Claudio of Turin's Commentarii in Genesim<sup>11</sup>, excerpts of Alcuin's Interrogationes et Responsiones in Genesin, Alcuin's De benedictionibus patriarcharum, biblical excerpts (Book of Kings, Proverbs, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, the Cantica Canticorum followed by excerpts of Bede's commentary)<sup>12</sup>, Gregory the Great's Expositio in Canticum Canticorum, excerpts of the Epistles and Revelation, and excerpts of Bede's homilies on Matthew. Then, on fols. 240r-79v, we have the Vita Euphrosynae (fol. 240r-52r), the Vita Marinae, dictae Marini (BHL 5528; fol. 252r-5v), a collection of hymns and excerpts from a Liber canticorum<sup>13</sup>. Finally, on fols. 280r-304r, the codex closes with excerpts of Augustine's De opere monachorum, excerpts of Ephrem Syrus' De compunctione cordis, and Augustine's Sermo de disciplina Christiana.

3. Reims, Bibliothèque d'Etude et du Patrimoine (Bibliothèque Carnegie), 1395 (K. 784) (= R)

s. IX med., Reims; 183 fols., 25 × 19.5 cm; 20 long lines; owner: Reims, Chapter of Notre-Dame (Gilles d'Aspremont, 1412; fol. 1, shelfmark «A, ord.2, n° 18»)<sup>14</sup>.

Copied in Reims in the mid-ninth century, in the time of archbishop Hincmar (845–882), the manuscript contains an anthology of hagiographical texts. The texts are numbered in red ink, and several present the feast day in the title. First, there is a dossier on the Virgin (fol. 2r–32r), a selection of miracula performed by Dionysius of Paris (BHL 2201; fols. 32r–8r)<sup>15</sup>, a dossier on Remigius of Reims (BHL 7151, 7150; fols. 38r–45r)<sup>16</sup>, two chapters of the Book of Esther (14–15; fols. 45r–7r), another dossier on the Holy Cross (BHL 4166, 4164, 4178, 4181g, 4169; fols. 48r–63v), and Sulpicius Severus' Epistula ad Bassulam, concerning Saint Martin's death (BHL 5613; fols. 64r–7r)<sup>17</sup>. Then, we find a sequence of Passiones and Vitae, several of them concerning female martyrs and saints<sup>18</sup>:

16. Clara Renedo called my attention to a third text copied between BHL 7151 and 7150, the Hic est ille Remigius, not classified in BHL: see M.-C. Isaïa, Remi de Reims. Mémoire d'un saint, histoire d'une Église, Paris 2010 (Histoire religieuse de la France 35), pp. 389–91.

17. According to Clara Renedo, this last text would have been preceded by a quire, lost long ago, containing the Vita Martini.

Our text, here entitled Vita sanctae Eufrosinae, is the only one that gives no indication of the feast day. Interestingly, two preceding texts, dated to two consecutive days, are variations of the same account on a young girl called Marina, sometimes Margarita, who refuses to marry, a story somewhat similar to that of Euphrosyne<sup>19</sup>.

This assemblage of ascetic literature, composed for a female monastic audience, was likely written in Reims in the time of Hincmar. It comprises more than thirty excerpts and full texts. On fols. 1r-26v, among a number of excerpts of the Vita Melaniae iunioris<sup>21</sup>, we find excerpts of Cyprian (from the Liber de oratione dominica, De opere et elemosynis, and De habitu uirginum)<sup>22</sup>, Pseudo-Leo's sermo 12.4, Maximus of Turin's serm. 37, Gregory the Great's epist. 12.2 (addressed to Savinella, Columba and Galla)<sup>23</sup>, Isidore's Sententiae 2.40, and Ambrose's Expositio in Lucam 2.22.

On fols. 26v-30v, we find an episode of Jonas of Bobbio's Vita Columbani concerning Burgundofara, abbess of the monastery of Faremoutiers, diocese of Meaux<sup>24</sup>, followed by excerpts of Basil's Rule<sup>25</sup> and Cassiodorus' Historia tripartita (the episode of a pious woman who stood up to emperor Valens in Edessa)<sup>26</sup>. Finally, after a section of Evagrius' Sententiae (fol. 31r-42r)<sup>27</sup>, we have three lives of female saints, usual texts in such a context:

This set of five quaternions and a final bifolio (with an addition leaf, fol. 9) was written most probably in Reims in the time of Hincmar<sup>31</sup>. It was attached to a section produced in Freising in the third quarter of the eighth century. M contains the Vita Euphrosynae (fol. 1r-7r), Isidore's Synonyma, from the beginning to 1.27 (fol. 7r-9v)<sup>32</sup>, Pseudo-Gregory the Great's Concordia testimoniorum (CPL 1717; CPPM IIA, 2292; fols. 10r-20v), Pseudo-Augustine's De unitate sanctae Trinitatis dialogus (CPL 379; CPPM IIA, 173; fols. 20v-3v), an assemblage of excerpts of Isidore's De differentiis rerum and Etymologiae (fol. 23v-41r), and the Breviarium apostolorum (BHL 652; fols. 41v-2v)<sup>33</sup>, followed by short texts and excerpts (fol. 42v-3v)<sup>34</sup>.

This fragment, two strips of a bifolium, emerged from the binding of a book preserved at the monastery of Michaelbeuern, founded before 977, not far from Salzburg. The first leaf of the bifolium contains the last section of the Vita Euphrosynae, from 18.1 <audiss> et Paphnutius to the end, with a loss of a couple of lines in the middle of the columns. It is followed by the Vita Pelagiae («réfection latine B», BHL 6607-9), the title of which is still visible at the bottom of fol. iv, in red ink. After a gap of one bifolium, fol. 2r-v continues with part of the Vita Pelagiae, from 13.83 tuae inmensitate suspensa to 16.102 missas simul<sup>36</sup>.

I am most grateful to Mme Françoise Simeray for permitting me to consult her study at the library of IRHT, Paris, some years ago.

Written possibly at the abbey of Saint-Amand in the third quarter of the ninth century<sup>38</sup>, the manuscript contains Palladius' Historia Lausiaca (Wellhausen's witness A; fols. 1r-26r) and an anthology of short ascetic and penitential stories, together with Passiones and Vitae of saints. At the end of the collection, we find four lives of female saints and the Transitus Mariae:

fol.	BHL	texts

82-4v	5528	Vita Mariniae (dictae Marini)
84v-106r	5885	Vita Melaniae <sup>40</sup>

The text is extensively emended by a hand using a darker ink (= V<sup>2</sup>).

9. Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale de France, lat. 3851<sup>A</sup>, Part II (folios. 17-56) (= F)

s. X, Limoges, Saint-Martial; 133 folios., 28 × 19.5 cm, 30 long lines; owners: Limoges, Saint-Martial<sup>41</sup>.

The manuscript was possibly written at the abbey of Saint-Martial de Limoges in the tenth century. This section (folios. 17-56), composed of five quires, contains Passiones and Vitae of saints. The beginning is truncated. It starts at the middle of the Passio Christophori (BHL 1766), followed by a few passiones apostolorum (Peter, Andrew, Philip, Bartholomew). Then we have an anthology that opens with a dossier on Martial of Limoges (BHL 5551, followed by a collection of miracles). The dossier ends abruptly on fol. 32v, for the subsequent folios are lost. After this gap we find an excerpt on Augustine's life, truncated at the beginning, and the following texts<sup>42</sup>:

38. In the third volume of Bischoff's Katalog (see note above), published by Birgit Ebersperger, there is a distinction between fol. 1-26 (no. 6406), located in 'Nordfrankreich', and fol. 27-106 (no. 6407). However, the same hand copied a number of Vitae Patrum on fol. 26v-30v. Another hand copied the Passio Mameatis from fol. 30v.

39. After this text we find a short selection of sentences mostly from Gregory the Great's hom. in euang.

The margins have been severely reduced, sometimes cutting off letters of the text.

42. The last column of the table below contains the liturgical date as given in the

fols.	BHL	texts	feast day
33r-4r	8690	Ps.-Ambr., Inventio Vitalis et Agricolae mm. Bononiae	III kal. Mai.

53v-4r	2176	Reuelatio ostensa papae Stephano	v kal. Aug.
54r-v	2183	Conscriptio Vishii	—
54v-6v	7851	Revelatio Stephani diac. protomartyris	III Non. Aug.

After the last text, on fol. 56v, which is the last verso of the section, the prologue to the Acts of the Apostles, written in the same hand, is squeezed into the available space<sup>43</sup>.

The Vitae Euphrosynae and the Vita Christinae are the only texts exhibiting a number: xxii and xxviii, respectively. Since this does not correspond to the present sequence and, from fol. 33r, the texts are copied continuously without losses, the numbers may have been copied from the model. As usual, no feast day is attributed to the Vita Euphrosynae.

s. X, southern Bavaria; 95 fols., 26 × 16 cm; 20 long lines; owner: Aldersbach, St Maria<sup>44</sup>.

The codex, owned by the abbey of Aldersbach, not far from Passau, contains a collection of familiar Vitae of female saints:

fols.	BHL	texts
1r-18r	6548	Hier., Vita Paulae
19r-49v	2718	Vita Euphrasiae
49v-51v	2723	Vita Euphrosynae (incomplete)
52r-62v	6607-9	Vita Pelagiae («réfection latine B»; missing the beginning)

The titles were added to the texts later. At the end, a unit of three quires has been attached, containing the Vita Brigidae (BHL 1455) with the title in manuscript. Parentheses indicate that the date is indicated within the text, usually at the end; otherwise, it is indicated after the title.

red ink (fols. 63v-95v)<sup>45</sup>. The Vita Euphrosynae ends abruptly at 6.2 caelorum regna et, for the folios between fols. 51 and 52 are lost. The beginning of the Vita Pelagiae, a copy of the so-called «réfection latine B», is also lost<sup>46</sup>.

This passionary was owned by the abbey of Saint-Rémacle in Stavelot. The Vita Euphrosynae appears on fols. 30r-36r, between the Vita prima sancti Amandi (BHL 332), ending abruptly at quadam die dum uir<sup>48</sup>, and the Vita Mariæ, dictæ Marini (BHL 5528). The beginning of our text is truncated. It offers from 1.7 <con>secutus est up to 14.1 uisita<bat>. Here one folio is missing. The text resumes with 15.2.1 <collo>quia, and goes until de end. The next two lines, required to the title of the Vita Mariana, are left blank.

The codex, which belonged to the library collected by François Andreu (1686-1748), was sold in 1750 to Augustin Calmet (1672-1757), abbot of Saint-Pierre de Senones. It contains Gregory the Great's Dialogorum libri IV. After this work, a set of ascetic Vitae was copied. First, the Vitae of three female saints:

After these lives, we have Ephrem's Vita Abrahae et Mariae (fol. 146r-57r), Jerome's Vita Malchi (fol. 157r-9v), and the Passio Machabaeorum (fol. 160r-6v), incomplete at the end, for the following folios are lost. The Vita Euphrosynae begins without a title<sup>54</sup>. It has been extensively emended by at least one hand, using a model with a similar redaction. This corrector is designated Ep<sup>2</sup> in the apparatus criticus.

The Vita Euphrosynae begins on the first recto of the subsequent quaternion. We do not know whether there is a loss of a quire between the ending of the Dialogi and the beginning of the Vita Euphrosynae. All other vitae in this section present the title.

14. Karlsruhe, Badische Landesbibliothek, Aug. Perg. LXXXIV

s. X  $\frac{3}{3}$ -XI, Reichenau, St Maria; 169 fols., 32 × 25.5 cm; 2 columns of 27/28 lines; owner: Reichenau, St Maria (ex-libris on fol. 1r)<sup>55</sup>.

This well-known manuscript contains a hagiographical collection clearly related to Reichenau. It includes, for instance, the Vita Symeonis Achivi, mon. Augiensis (BHL 7950) and the Translatio sanguinis Domini Augiam anno 925 et miracula (BHL 4152). Several other texts concern saints from Germanic areas: the Vita Meginradi heremita, related to Einsiedeln (BHL 5878), the Vita Fin-dani, reclusi Rhenaujensis (BHL 2982), the Vita Kyliani (BHL 4661), the Vita Burchardi episcopi Wirziburgensis (BHL 1483), the Vita Wynnebaldi ab. Heidenheimensis (BHL 8996), and the Vita Willibaldi episcopi Eichstetensis (BHL 8931). Many additions, usually relating to Reichenau, are found in blank spaces and on empty pages<sup>56</sup>.

The texts are carefully presented. Often, at the end of a text the scribes left the rest of the folio free and started the next text on the following recto, sometimes on a new quire. The translatio of Christ's blood to Reichenau in 925 has beautifully decorated initials. The arrangement does not strictly follow the liturgical calendar; there is a certain predominance of saints corresponding to the months from May to August. Some texts exhibit the feast day in the title, in others the date is found at the conclusion of the text, some others omit it.

The Vita Euphrosynae is the second text of the anthology (fol. 3r-8v), copied between two texts concerning Umbrian saints, the Passio Heraclii Iusti et Mauri (BHL 3819m), indicating 3 May (Heraclius' relics were venerated in Quaternions «v», between fol. 31 and 32, is missing.

This is followed by a later bionion containing a sermon on Mark (fol. 145-8). Two quaternions, fol. 149-64, added to the main section, contain the vita of Ulrich of Augsburg, who died in 973, composed by Berno of Reichenau (BHL 8362) (c. 978-1048).

Reichenau from the tenth century), and the Vita Iuvenalis episcopi (BHL 4614)<sup>57</sup>. Interestingly, the liturgical date 1 January, found in the Carolingian martyrologies, appears in the explicit: Vita sanctae Eufrosinae uirginis sub interpretatione Castissimae quod est kl. Ian.

s. X-XI, northern Italy; 252 fols.; 31 × 22.5 cm; 30 long lines; owner: Novara, Cattedrale di Santa Maria<sup>58</sup>.

The manuscript contains a large anthology of ascetic texts<sup>59</sup>. First, we have an assemblage of Vitae usually found in this sort of context: Jerome's Vita Pauli (BHL 6596), Vita Hilarionis (BHL 3879), and Vita Malchi (BHL 5190)<sup>60</sup>;

These are followed by the main collections of ascetic literature: Rufinus' Historia monachorum (BHL 6524)<sup>61</sup>, a selection of Paschasius of Dume's Liber Geronticon (BHL 6531), mixed with portions of Pelagius' and John's Abortiones (BHL 6527–6529), Pseudo-Rufinus' Verba seniorum (BHL 6525), mixed with portions of the Abortiones, Antonius' Vita Symeonis Stylitae (BHL 7957), excerpts of Gregory of Tours' In gloriam martyrum (CPL 1024), Heito of Reichenau's De visione et obitu Wettini, and Palladius' Historia Lausiaca (BHL 6532)<sup>62</sup>.

This anthology includes three lives of ascetic women:

The Vita Euphrosynae offers a number of marginal indications: cum sancto sanctus e(st) (on 4.5), non cessa orare (4.9), argumento sciscitatur (5.5), placitum consilium (6.2), fiduciam habens in domino multam referring to chapter 7, optima persuasio (8.1, where the abbot quotes Luke 14, 26), exaudibilis oratio (8.9), sola coepit manere (11.5), luctuosa descriptio (12.6 ff.), sana consolatio (13.6), praesens erat quam quaerebat (14.7), per gratiam dei respiravit (15.4), magna compunction (17.3), et perditum restituit oculum (20.1).

THE EARLY TEXTUAL TRANSMISSION

The earliest extant copy of Translation B surfaced in the late eighth or early ninth century in the region of Würzburg, at an unidentified scriptorium under Anglo-Saxon influence: it is today Würzburg, M.p.th.q. 26 (W). It was a period of Christianisation of the recently conquered territories, implying the creation of a network of monasteries. In many cases, aristocratic women played a significant role in creating and sponsoring these monasteries, a receptive audience to this particular inspirational type of Christian literature. W seems indeed to be connected to this sort of context.

W preserves the closest textual form to the Greek source (a particular branch represented by the Greek C, as we shall see below). For instance, in 13.8, all manuscripts but W and related copies offer:

61. Schulz-Flügel, Rufinus, «Historia monachorum» cit. (ms. N, γ family).

62. Wellhausen, Die lateinische Übersetzung der «Historia Lausiaca» cit. (ms. N).

Audiens haec Pafnutius recepit consolationem gratias agens Deo.

Actually, this sentence has an omission. The correct version is found in W and related copies:

Audiens haec Pafnutius recepit consolationem et osculans senem et omnes fratres abiit in domum suam gratias agens Deo.

See the Greek source text:

Ακούσας δὲ ταῦτα ὁ Παφνούτιος καὶ μικρόν τι πιστεύσας, ἀσπασάμενος τὸν ἀββᾶν καὶ τοὺς ἀδελφούς, ἀπῆλθεν ἐν τῇ πόλει εὐχαριστῶν τῷ Θεῷ.

Two tenth-century manuscripts, the Bavarian Ma (Munich clm 2531, Part I), containing only the first six chapters, and Ei (Einsiedeln, Stiftsbibliothek 263), belong to W's line of transmission (hereafter a). They present an extremely similar text to that in W. Ma and Ei present an almost identical text, as demonstrated by a large number of exclusive variants and errors (e.g., the omission of 3.4 multos autem ... filii suis). Ei is not a copy of Ma (see Ma's omission of 5.1 monasterii ... abbas, not in Ei). Finally, neither derives from W. Indeed, W has an omission in 10.1 caused by a saut du même au même:

Dicit ei senex ille: «Bene uenisti, fili: ecce monasterium, si tibi placet, habita nobiscum». Dicit ei senex: «Iuuenis es ... ».

The correct text is in Ei (the text is lost in Ma) and all other copies:

Dicit ei senex ille: «Bene uenisti, fili: ecce monasterium, si tibi placet, habita nobiscum». Dicit ei abbas ille: «Quod est nomen tuum?» Dicit ei: «Smaragdus». Dicit ei senex: «Iuuenis es ... ».

The Greek source reads:

Λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ ἀββᾶς: «Καλῶς ἥλθες, τέκνον· ίδου τὸ μοναστήριον, καθέξου μεθ' ἡμῶν. Τί δὲ λέγεται τὸ ὄνομά σου;» Λέγει αὐτῷ· «Σμάραγδος». Καὶ λέγει αὐτῷ ὁ ἀββᾶς: «Ἐπειδὴ νεώτερος εἶ ...»

A few more examples:

All other copies used in the present edition – D R V P F B K E M Ep N – descend from a common ancestor. I designate this class of copies β. The omission in 13.8 mentioned above is a good example of a typical error of β. A few more examples of common errors and variants:

	α	β
4.1	post non multum uero temporis	post multum uero temporis
7.8	ex qua genuit me	quae genuit me
10.5	ecce	–

12.5	nusquam	numquam / non

The origins of this line of transmission are connected to northern Francia. Indeed, the earliest manuscripts of this class were produced in Reims and related centres.

The earliest extant witness is D (Düsseldorf B. 3), a codex produced in northern Francia for a high-ranking women's community, possibly in the second decade of the ninth century. Several copies seem to be related to D: R (Reims 1395), P (Paris lat. 2994<sup>A</sup>), M (Munich clm 6382), and V (Valenciennes, 521), all copied in the mid- or third quarter of the ninth century in Reims (except V, perhaps copied at Saint-Amand). Three tenth-century copies are related to this particular version: F (Paris lat. 3851<sup>A</sup>), owned very early by Saint-Martial, Limoges, B (Brussels II 2568 (3316)), which belonged to St.-Rémacle, Stavelot, and K (Karlsruhe Aug. perg. 84), a manuscript of the late tenth or early eleventh century from Reichenau. I designate this group of manuscripts  $\gamma$ . A few examples of errors and variants (most of the examples in  $\alpha$  and the other copies of the  $\beta$  class are confirmed by the Greek source text):

	$\alpha E M Ep N$	$D P F R V B K (= \gamma)$
4.5	post hoc	propter hoc
8.9	omnes	om.
11.6	operam dabat	operam agebat (operam dabat B)
12.1	manere solita erat	manere consueuerat (maneret P F)
16.5a	et tu per quem (et tempus in quo E M Ep N )	et tempus quem
21.2	demoratus est	mortuus est

None of these copies is a descriptus of D. See, for instance, 6.3 exiens (om. D), 11.4 te egressurum (tr. D), 13.4 die noctuque (om. D).

It is possible that D P F B K descend from a common model ( $= \gamma'$ ), although the evidence is meagre:

	$\alpha R V E M Ep N$	$D P F B K (= \gamma')$
13.2	adesse omnes fratres	ad se omnes fratres uenire
18.2	in terra	om.
18.3	autem	ad eum
19.3	conseruorum	conseruorum et fratum

P and F derive from a common ancestor. See, for instance, among many other exclusive variants:

	$\alpha D R V B K E M Ep N$	$P F$
3.5	ab eo dari	dari ab eo tr.
5.4	pro caritate domine frater	domine frater pro caritate tr.
7.8	iniquo	in quo
8.3	ptochia	copia
9.9	adduco	in hoc loco adduco
12.1	pater illius	om.
12.1	manere solita erat (manere consueuerat $\gamma$ )	maneret
12.4	uim	eos
12.9	laborantium	orantium
13.1	ad pedes eius	eius pedibus
15.2h	per eius orationes et omnium fratrum	per orationem fratrum

F does not derive directly or indirectly from P. See, for instance, 4.4 mirabatur eorum uitam (om. P); 6.3 uade: uenit P; 14.3 uno: quodam P; 16.2 permette me: permittere P; 16.5a ubi add. ante quod mibi P; 17.4 perdurare: durare P. It is likely that the model of P contained annotations, or at least traces of previous annotations. In 6.5, the text reads: tu autem adduc unum de monachis. Et, quomodo uoles, occurret tibi cum magno gaudio. In place of quomodo uoles, P offers quomodo uel uolueris, which represents the incorporation of an alternative reading, a reading only found in F (quomodo uolueris). F is also a reworked text. In 8.1, in the quotation of Luke, it is the only witness to offer et sorores, absent from the Greek source and the Latin translation B. Both copies were emended some time later. In F, there are a number of interlinear emendations in a lighter brown ink, supplying missing words and emending many passages (= F<sup>2</sup>). In most cases, the emendations in P and F do not permit to identify the model. Interestingly, an emendation in P and F is found in the α copies (11.6 in infirma aetate: α P P.C. F<sup>2</sup>, in infirmitate β).

R and V descend from a common ancestor. A few examples of typical features:

	α D P F B K E M Ep N	R V
3.5	et postulabat ab eo dari filiam eius filio suo	om.
8.1	et fratrem	om.
10.6	facta oratione	om.
10.6	consignauit	signauit
14.6	et cognoscens eum	om.
15.1	et gloria sempiterna	om.
15.2g	nimiris tristis	ministrans
15.2m	replebatur lacrimis	lacrimis replebatur
16.3	uocatoque	uocato itaque
16.5c	actum est	apertum est R , aptum est V
16.5d	inueniam	recipiam
17.4	adducerem eas hic	om.

It is likely that V is not a descriptus of R. See 3.2 tantum erat for tantam; 8.6 est for ergo scit, whereas V has the correct readings. Nor is R a descriptus of V (e.g. 15.2l non: om. V). V is emended in a darker brown ink, with the help of a similar model (= V<sup>2</sup>). In 5.5, V has the correct ad conuersationem, which has been altered to the erroneous ad conuersionem, as in R; in 12.7 meam uineam siccauit is rendered into meum amnem siccauit in R and V<sup>2</sup>. The text in R is also emended by a hand, in darker brown ink, which may have emended the whole codex<sup>64</sup>.

64. On this hand, see Renedo, Étude et édition critique cit., p. 99 and pp. 431-5.

The text in K has been reworked stylistically. It is possible that K belongs to the same line of transmission of D: see, for instance, 1.4 nocte et die ecclesiisque adhaerens om. D K; 6.1 perscrutans: scrutans D K; 12.5 flebat: β, flebant D B K. But the evidence is insufficient to prove it beyond any reasonable doubt. Being a late copy, it likely represents a contaminated form. Also B is a reworked version.

There is another family of copies within the β-class, hereafter designated δ.
It comprises: E (El Escorial I-III-13), copied by a Visigothic hand perhaps in the Catalan region in the mid-ninth century (from chapter 4 to the end); M (Munich clm 6832), produced in Reims in the third quarter of the ninth century;
Ep (Épinal 118), written in the tenth century in northern Italy, and N (Novara LXI [9]), also of the tenth century. Some characteristic errors and variants of their common ancestor δ:

	α γ	E M Ep N (= δ)
1.6	apud Deum esse dicebatur	esse dicebant apud deum tr.
4.3	castitate	castitate et humilitate
4.9	extendique	extendsensque
4.10	consortium	consortium habere
6.3	induta	indue te
7.10	miserae	om.
7.11	uerbum dei	uerbum salutis
8.6	ergo scit enim tempus poenitentiam agere	modo enim tempus est poenitentiae
8.10	et glorificans deum	om.
11.4	psallere ... manducare	psallas ... manduces
12.4	et Aegyptum	om.
12.5	nusquam α / numquam γ	non
15.1	elimosinam ... humilitatem	humilitatem ... elemosinam
15.1	nec patrem super eum	om.
15.2c	manifestare eam tibi	manifestare eam tibi deus
16.5c	actum est	de ea reuelarum est
18.1	Pafnutius talia uerba	talia uerba Pafnutius

E and Ep descend from a common ancestor, as we can infer from a large number of variants exclusively found in the two copies. For instance,

a γ M N	E Ep
7.5 uendens quae secum habebat	om.
7.7 nimis	multae nimis
7.8 de hac uita	de hac luce
8.1 propriam animam	animam suam
13.4 aliunde	pro aliunde
13.5 alicui fratri	fratribus
14.5 et introduxit eum in cellam eius	om.
15.2g nimis tristis dicebat mihi	dicebat mihi nimis tristis sum

Ep is not a copy of E (remember that the first four chapters in E belong to a distinct translation).

It is possible that N is closer to M than to E and Ep, but the evidence is insufficient to prove it beyond any reasonable doubt. The short portion of text in Mb (Michaelbeuern Fragn. Perg. I.1), a ninth-century fragment from the area of Salzburg, is insufficient to establish its stemmatic position.

The δ-class circulated in the eleventh and the twelfth century. See the following examples:

The relations between copies of Translation B prior to the eleventh century can roughly be represented as follows:

THE GREEK SOURCE

The model of Translation B was an exemplar belonging to the line of transmission from which derives C, a non-menological anthology produced in the tenth century and preserved in Abydos in the Middle Ages. This is demonstrated by a huge amount of evidence. In fact, Translation B contains every single addition exclusively found in C (see, for instance, chapters 15 and 16), every omission and peculiar variant typical of this particular Greek redaction. One example. In 16.5b-d, C has a large addition, found nowhere else:

<sup>5b</sup>. «Τίς ἔτι ὑποστηρίζει μου τὸ γῆρας; τίς ἔτι παραμυθήσεται με ὄδυρόμενον, πρὸς τίνα ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν ἀπέλθω; οὐδάι μοι τῷ ταλαιπώρῳ γέροντι, δισσοῖς κακοῖς περιέπεσον. <sup>c</sup> Τριάκοντα καὶ ὀκτὼ χρόνους θρηνήσας τὴν ἐμὴν θυγατέρα διήρκεσα, μηδενὸς εἰς πέρας ἐλθόντος ὃν ηὐχόμην περὶ αὐτῆς. Καὶ νῦν ἄλλο ὅμοιον πένθος διαδέχεται με. <sup>d</sup> Τί ἐλπίσω ἀπὸ τοῦ νῦν καὶ τούτου ὑστερούμενος; ἀπελεύσομαι πρὸ αὐτοῦ εἰς τὸν ἄδην».

perdidi filiam meam, nihil mihi actum est, quod die noctuque orabam pro ea; et nunc similem illius detinet me incomparabilis dolor.<sup>d</sup> Quid sperem amodo? Vbi consolationem inueniam? Iam descendam lugens in infernum».

A few more examples of variants uniquely found in C and in Translation B:

	Greek text	C	Trans. B

12.9	ἐκείνη τοῦ γήρως ἡ βακτηρία	—	—

- 16.6-7 «ἀλλὰ παρακαλῶ σε, κύριέ μου, παράμεινον ὃδε τρεῖς ἡμέρας καὶ μὴ ἀποστῆς ἀπ' ἐμοῦ». Καὶ λέγει ὁ Παφνούντιος: «Ἐκέλευσας». (+ φύσει οὐκ ἀφῶ σε τὰς τρεῖς ἡμέρας δ)
- «ἀλλὰ παρακαλῶ σε ἀνάμεινον ὃδε τρεῖς ἡμέρας». Ὁ δέ νομίσας ἀπόκρισιν δέχεσθαι ἢ ἀπὸ θεοῦ ἀποκαλυφθῆναι αὐτῷ ἔνεκεν αὐτῆς, λέγει αὐτῷ ὅτι οὐκ ἀφίσταμαι τὰς τρεῖς ἡμέρας.
- «sed obsecro te ut per tres dies non me desereras neque derelinquas». Haesitans autem Pafnutius intra se metipsum per triduum dicens: «Forsitan aliquid ei Deus reuelauit de me». Tertio autem die, dixit ad Smaragdum: «Exspectavi sicut me rogasti, domine meus frater, et non discessi alicubi per tres continuos dies.

Nowhere does Translation B offer material incompatible with C's line of transmission.

We find evidence of this relationship even in the arrangement of the sentences. In 7.1, as shown in the table above, Translation B replicates the genitive absolute only found in C. Another example. In 1.3-4, the consensus of the Greek manuscripts offers:

<sup>3</sup>Ἐν πολλῇ οὖν ἀθυμίᾳ ὑπῆρχεν ὁ ἀνὴρ αὐτῆς περὶ τούτου ὅτι οὐκ εἶχεν φίλους καταλείψει τὴν οὐσίαν αὐτοῦ, ἵνα μετὰ τὴν αὐτοῦ ἀποβίωσιν τὰ πράγματα αὐτοῦ καλῶς διοικοῦνται εἰς τοὺς δεομένους. <sup>4</sup>Η οὖν γυνὴ αὐτοῦ, Θεωροῦσα τὸν ἄνδρα αὐτῆς οὕτως ἀθυμοῦντα, οὐκ ἐπαύετο νυκτὸς καὶ ἡμέρας ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις προσεδρεύουσα καὶ νηστείαις καὶ δεήσεσιν, τὸν Θεὸν ἰκετεύουσα παρασχεθῆναι αὐτοῖς παιδίον.

C reads as follows:

<sup>3</sup>Τοῦ οὗν ἀνδρὸς αὐτῆς ἐν πολλῇ ἀθυμίᾳ ὑπάρχοντος ὅτι μὴ εἶχεν τὸ ποῦ καταλεῖψαι τὴν αὐτοῦ οὐσίαν, ὅτι μετὰ τὴν αὐτοῦ ἀποβίωσιν καλῶς τὰ πράγματα αὐτοῦ διοικοῦντο εἰς τοὺς δεομένους, <sup>4</sup> αὐτῇ οὖν ἐπαύσατο νυκτὸς καὶ ἡμέρας ταῖς ἐκκλησίαις προσεδρεύουσα, νηστείαις καὶ δεήσεσιν, ἰκετεύουσα τὸν Θεὸν παρασχεῖν αὐτῆς τέκνον. Μάλιστα θεωροῦσα τὸν ἄνδρα αὐτῆς ἐν ἀθυμίᾳ ὄντα [...]

Translation B has the following text:

C is the sole Greek manuscript to transpose μάλιστα θεωροῦσα τὸν ἄνδρα αὐτῆς ἐν ἀθυμίᾳ ὄντα after τέκνον (παιδίον in all other Greek manuscripts).

Likewise Translation B gives the sentence maxime uidens uirum suum nimium fluctuantem after filium. Incidentally, this transposition and the elimination of αὕτη (by the translator or by accident in the course of the textual transmission) caused an error in the Latin text: the subject of non cessabat became the husband (uir), where in the original text (and in C) it is the wife (ή οὖν γυνὴ / αὕτη C).

In sum, the Greek manuscript C and the model of Translation B descend from a common ancestor.

THE TRANSLATOR'S TECHNIQUE

The Latin text is mostly a translation ad verbum. We have seen many examples above. See the following one (7.3):

Καὶ περιχαρῆς γενόμενος ὁ Παφνούτιος, πολλήν τε ἀφθονίαν χρειῶν λαβών, εἰσῆλθεν ἐν τῷ σκαφιδῷ καὶ ἀπῆλθεν ἐν τῷ μοναστηρίῳ.

Translation A is quite superficial:

Et cum gaudio secutus est eum pater puellae, portans secum diuersa necessaria.

The model of Translation B presented almost the same text:

Περιχαρῆς δὲ γενόμενος, ὁ κύριος Παφνούτιος, καὶ πολλὴν ἀφθονίας χρείαν λαβών, εἰσῆλθεν ἐν σκαφιδίῳ καὶ ἀπῆλθεν ἐν τῷ μοναστηρίῳ.

Translation B is more literal:

Gauisus est autem Pafnutius; ingressusque cum eo in nauiculam, abierunt in monasterium.

As often, the author took the liberty of abridging certain passages, and expanding others. For instance, in 16.6, the consensus of the Greek manuscripts reads:

Καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ· «Μὴ λυποῦ, μηδὲ δάκρυε. Ο γὰρ Θεός, ως ἔτι εῖ ῶδε, πληροφορεῖ σε ἔνεκεν αὐτῆς· ἀλλὰ παρακαλῶ σε, κύριέ μου, παράμεινον ῶδε τρεῖς ήμέρας καὶ μὴ ἀποστῆς ἀπ' ἐμοῦ».

The text in C is very different:

Ταῦτα αὐτοῦ ὁδυρομένου καὶ κλαίοντος, λέγει αὐτῷ ή Εὐφροσύνη· «Τί οὗτος συνθλίβεις σεαυτὸν καὶ τὴν ἐμὴν ψυχὴν ἐκταράσσεις;»

The translator followed the text preserved in C and enhanced it with an example extracted from the Book of Genesis<sup>65</sup>:

Videns autem eum Smaragdus uehementer plorantem et nullam consolationem recipientem, ait ad eum: «Quid turbaris et temetipsum interficis? Numquid inualida est manus Domini, aut Deo quicquam est difficile? Iam pone finem tristitiae. Recordare quomodo patriarchae Iacob manifestauerit Deus Ioseph, quem quasi mortuum lugebat».

EDITIONS

Translation B was published for the first time by Heribert Rosweyde (1569-1629) in his Vitae patrum, printed in 1615<sup>66</sup>. It appears at the end of Book I, within an assemblage of female saints' Lives, usual in ascetic contexts, such as Eugenia, Euphrasia, Mary the Harlot, Thais, Pelagia, Mary of Egypt, Marina (also Marinus), among others. This is the most common context in which the Vita Euphrosynae circulated in the Middle Ages. The editor used a manuscript belonging to the δ-class, close to the text in Ep (Épinal 118) and Boulogne-sur-Mer 106.

Rosweyde's edition is the source of the copy found in the second volume of February of the Acta Sanctorum, published in 1658, accompanied by a study by Godefroid Henskens (1601-1681)<sup>67</sup>. Euphrosyne appears on 11 February. Her Vita is followed by a Latin translation of Simon Metaphrastes' Vita Euphrosynae (BHG 626) by Gentian Hervet (1499-1584).

Recently, Lorenzo Lozzi Gallo published the Vita Euphrosynae in an appendix to his study of the text in Anglo-Saxon England<sup>68</sup>. This is not a crit-

65. The translator added a new number of biblical passages absent from the Greek model. See 13.5 (Prv 3.11-2), 13.6 (Mt 10.29), 17.2 (Cfr Phil 4.19), 18.1 (Gn 43.30), among others.

In 2021, Clara Renedo Mirambell produced an excellent edition of the version copied in Reims 1395 (our R)<sup>69</sup>. In an apparatus criticus, Renedo gives the variants of Würzburg M.p.th.q. 26, our W. The Latin text is supplemented with an apparatus of biblical sources and a commentary.

EDITORIAL PROCEDURES

In establishing the text, only copies produced up to the late tenth century are used. This is a pragmatic option. First, they are likely to fully represent the initial stages of its textual history, and it seemed pointless to overburden the apparatus criticus with an immense amount of material unnecessary for reconstructing the earliest stage of the text. Secondly, my collation of all eleventh- and twelfth-century manuscripts identified so far, and many thirteenth-century and later witnesses, proved to offer nothing of substance for this purpose. In any case, the copies up to the late twelfth century have been mentioned above in the history of the textual transmission.

As with the previous texts, I used a normalised orthography (see pp. 61–2). This is the only way to obtain a coherent text when working with manuscripts that present different spelling features. We can never be sure whether even the earliest witnesses reflect the orthography of the original text, or whether the graphic forms we have in the manuscripts are due to the scribe who copied that particular manuscript, or to a scribe active earlier in the chain of transmission. In any case, I have recorded some spellings in the apparatus criticus when they are peculiar or significant. The reader thus has access to the full information about the witnesses used in the edition. The order of the sigla is W γ (D R V P F B K) δ (E M Ep N) Ma Ei Mb. The division of the text is that adopted with the previous texts.

TRANSLATION C OF THE «LIFE OF EUPHROSYNE»
(«BHL» 2725)

In the time of bishop Pacificus († 844), a translation of the Vita Euphrosynae surfaced in a collection of female saints' lives produced in Verona. It is easy to see that what we have here is a distinct translation, not a redaction of one of the two previously discussed. This is the only Latin version to render 12.4 κατὰ τὴν Αἴγυπτον καὶ Λιβύην as per Alexandriam et Libyam, instead of per totam Alexandriam et Aegyptum (Translation B) or the vague in omnem patriam (Translation A). It is also the only Latin text to preserve the origins of the monk who tonsures Euphrosyne: 7.5 per dei autem dispensationem quidam senex magnus de Scete ueniens opera manuum suarum uendebat, corresponding to κατ' οἰκονομίαν δὲ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ιδού τις γέρων ἐκ τῆς Σκήτεως ἐλθὼν τὸ ἐργόχειρον αὐτοῦ ἐπάλει. The Greek model was a lost exemplar belonging to the ε-line of transmission, as we shall see below.

THE MANUSCRIPTS

Only a fragment of this collection of female saints' Vitae survives. It is today Part III of Verona, Archivio Capitolare, XCV (90) (= V). The manuscript was studied by Paolo Chiesa, who published his findings in a remarkable essay, and we have very detailed descriptions<sup>1</sup>. Therefore, it suffices to recall a few aspects. The manuscript was copied in the first half of the ninth century in Verona. Part III (fols. 151-73, 180-202) corresponds to quires 20-2 and 24-6 of the present manuscript, and are numbered «I» to «VI»<sup>2</sup>. They are all quaternions (the last one lacking one leaf), measuring around 30 × 20.5 cm, and ruled in twenty-six long lines. The contents are as follows:

fol.	texts	BHL
151v-62v	Passio Sapientiae et Fidei, Spei et Caritatis <sup>3</sup>	2968f
162v-73v	Vita Marinae (dictae Margaritae) <sup>4</sup>	5303/5303c
180r-9r	Vita Euphrosynae	2725
189r-97r	Vita Pelagiae («réfection latine A'») <sup>5</sup>	6605
197r-9v	Vita Marinae (dictae Marini)	5528
199v-200r	haec est castitas sancta ... <sup>6</sup>

These are standard Vitae for this sort of anthology, often compiled for a female audience. The titles of the texts do not indicate the liturgical dates. On fols. 200r-2v, a different hand, in smaller letters, added the Passio Iusti (BHL 4604) to the last unused folios. This time, the title indicates the feast day («II-II Non. Nov.»)<sup>7</sup>. Therefore, the section would originally have ended with the Passio Marinae, followed by a short text praising chastity.

A fragment of another copy of this very translation is found in Part VII (fols. 167-70) of Rome, Biblioteca Vallicelliana, tom. XX (= R)<sup>8</sup>. It is a set of four leaves measuring 58 × 38.5 cm, ruled in two columns of thirty-nine lines, written in the eleventh century in Beneventan script<sup>9</sup>. The leaves contain:

2. Fol. 151r, the initial recto of this sequence of quires, was left blank, as often happens at the beginning of a codex. The subsequent quire of the present manuscript, that is, quire 27 (fols. 203-10), is numbered starting from «I» again.

The Passio Theodori ducis, written by Bonitus of Naples between 939 and 955, and the Passio Aquilae et Priscillae (here called Prisca) are found in other Italian hagiographical collections. The title of the Passio Aquilae et Priscillae presents the liturgical date «xv kal. febr.», that is, 18 January, against the usual (Carolingian) 8 July.

A third, complete, copy is found in Milan, Biblioteca Ambrosiana, D 525 inf., a codex written in the twelfth century in Italy in Caroline script (= M)<sup>10</sup>. It comprises 159 folios, measuring around 39.5 × 30 cm, ruled in two columns of forty-six lines. It contains the usual assemblage of ascetic texts. After Jerome's Vita Pauli and Vita Hilarionis, Athanasius' Vita Antonii<sup>11</sup>, Eu-gippius' Vita Severini, Palladius' Historia Lausiaca<sup>12</sup>, Rufinus' Historia monachorum<sup>13</sup>, and Pelagius' and John's Adbhortationes, we have a collection of female saints' Vitae<sup>14</sup>:

These are followed by Jerome's Vita Malchi, excerpts of Bede's Historia Ecclesiastica, and the Vita Macarii Romani (BHL 5104).

Finally, another copy is found in a fifteenth-century paper manuscript, today Rome, Biblioteca Vallicelliana, B. 84 (= B). This handwritten book, of small format (14.2 × 10.5 cm), contains a collection of Vitae of female saints:

THE TRANSMISSION OF THE TEXT

The earliest extant copy of Translation C is V, most likely produced in the scriptorium of Pacificus of Verona. Its model was already defective. For instance, in chapter 2, the copyist of V left half a line empty, corresponding to et annuens deus utrius as we see in M and B, probably because his model was difficult to read here. In many other places, we find omissions and nonsensical errors that can be emended by comparison with the other copies and the Greek text. A few details suggest that its model was, or stemmed from, a pre-Carolingian exemplar. See, for instance: 9.5 agebat (for aiebat), 4.1 and 9.3 habuit (for abiit), among others. On the other hand, it is a slightly reworked version.

The other three copies do not descend from V, but from an exemplar in a higher stemmatic position. This is indicated by the fact that V omits most of chapter 18, while R, M, and B offer the whole chapter. In 12.9, R, M, and B preserve the two sentences in the Greek text, ἐκείνη τῶν μόχθων ἡ ἀνάπαυσις, ἐκείνη τῶν ὄδυνῶν ὁ κουφισμός, rendering them as illa laborum requies, illa dolorum subleuatio; V, however, maintains elements of both sentences but combined into a single (nonsensical) phrase: illaborum subleuatio. A few more examples demonstrating that the texts of R, M, and B are closer to the Greek model than V:

	Greek text	R (7.9-19.4) M B	V
7.11	καὶ παρ' αὐτοῦ ἀκοῦσαι λόγον	et ab eo audire uerbum bonum	ut ab eo audirem uerbum bonum
12.6	θησαυρὸν	thesaurum	aurum
12.11	θρηνώδη φωνὴν	lugubres ... uoces	lugubres
13.3	ὅπως φανερώσῃ ἡμῖν ποῦ ἔστιν ἡ θυγάτηρ τοῦ κυροῦ Παφνουτίου	ut nobis manifestet ubi est filia domini Pafnutii	ut nobis manifestet filiam domini Papnutii
14.3	καλῷ ἀδελφῷ	cum fratri bono	om.
19.1	ταῦτα ἀκούσας	haec audiens	haec uidens

The portion of text common to all copies suggests that R, M and B descend from a common ancestor (=  $\beta$ ):

	V	R (7.9-19.4) M B
7.9	sorditia	sorditiae
8.1	non abnegauerit	abnegauerit
8.4	substantiam suam	om.
8.6	a mane	de mane

M and B do not descend from the eleventh-century R. The name of Smaragdus' tutor is Agapitus in R, whereas V, M, and B have the correct Agapius. See also, for instance, a few details:

	V M B	R (7.9-19.4)
8.6	differri	ferre
8.7	uexaudi	uoacui
8.9	proclamans	proclamatus
8.9	et uiuat	om.
10.3	in manus / in manu	om.
11.3	iter	frater

M and B descend from a common model (=  $\gamma$ ). They share, for instance, the omission in 16.2-3, caused by a saut du même au même: «[Smaragdum quia] ualde anima mea diligit eum». Et uocans Agapium, ait ei: «Perduc eum ad dominum Smaragdum» [quia ...]. Naturally, this could be a coincidence. But further variants and errors make the connection between M and B likely:

	V R (7.9-19.4)	M B
7.4	et dixit ei	om.
12.1	Eufrosinae	de Eufrosina
13.2	uenissent	conuenissent

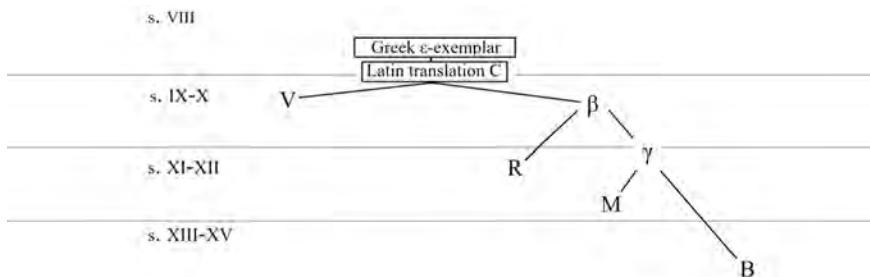

14.4	ad dominum Smaragdum	ad domum Smaragdi
18.6	uae uae	uae uae uae
21.3	ueniens	perueniens

In 15.2, M and B preserve a better text, closer to the Greek model, against V and R: in tantum ut (et B, om. M) iam (om. M) commori copulatus amoris eius studeret seems to correspond better to καὶ ὥρμησεν περιπλακῆναι θέλων αὐτῷ καὶ συναποθανεῖν than in tantum ut iam corpori copulatus amari eius studeret in R and in tanta compunctionis copulabatur amoris eius ut studio in V. Only M and B preserve the idea of «dying together».

B is not a copy of M. In many details B presents a better text than that in M. These details, in which both copies present equally good equivalents from a grammatical point of view, are often too little to prove an emendation by contamination from a different model. See a few more substantial errors and variants in M:

	V R (7.9-19.4) B	M
2.4	cognominauit eam Euphrosynam	cognouerunt eam ipse quam eufrosina
2.5	uisione	corpore
3.4	nobilitatis (nobilitate et B )	non tantum
7.8	suam facultatem	substantiam suam
8.7	adimpleas	ad deum applies
9.5	affatibus	a fratribus
10.3	iubes	uolueris
13.5	neque deficere	om.
16.1	moderata	molesta
19.3	comes angelorum	omnium angelorum

The relations between the above-mentioned copies of Translation C can roughly be represented as follows:

A reworked version of Translation C is copied in Gorizia, Biblioteca del Seminario Teologico Centrale, Tesoro della Cattedrale, cod. 8, a large-format passionary produced in the mid-thirteenth century in, or at least for, the Patriarchate of Aquileia<sup>18</sup>. Together with other volumes (Gorizia 7, Cividale del Friuli XVI, and a codex now lost, whose contents can be reconstructed), the manuscript was produced in a period of renovation of the liturgical books in Aquileia<sup>19</sup>. Originally, the Vita presented no title. At the end, we read the liturgical date of 1 January.

THE GREEK MODEL

The source of this Latin translation was a δ-exemplar belonging to the subclass ε of the Greek textual transmission. Against Translations A and B, C states that very soon Paphnutius asked the abbot for help fulfilling his wish to have a child (2.1) – while all other copies say that Paphnutius waited many years before he met the abbot – and that Euphrosyne was six years old when she was baptised, and not seven as in the other lines of transmission of the Greek text (2.4). Both details are only found in δ. In 8.1, the author of the δ-version emended the (defective) quotation of Luke 14.26 adding ἀδελφὰς to ἀδελφοὺς, which we only find in Translation C.

At the end of chapter 16, Translation C has a part of the addition uniquely found in δ, φύσει οὐκ ἀφῶ σε τὰς τρεῖς ἡμέρας: certe non abscedo. At the beginning of chapter 17, the addition preceding ώς οὖν ἔγνω ὅτι ..., only found in δ (ἐνστάσης οὖν τῆς τρίτης ἡμέρας), was replicated by the translator of C: transactis namque tribus diebus.

Within the δ-class, the model was an ε-exemplar. See a few variants uniquely found in ε and Translation C:

13.5	καὶ ὅταν βούλεται	καὶ ὅταν βούλεται ἡ φιλανθρωπία αὐτοῦ	et quando eius uoluerit pietas

At the beginning of chapter 6, the Greek copies agree:

Πάντα οὖν τὰ τοῦ μοναχικοῦ βίου περιεργασαμένη, λέγει τῷ μοναχῷ· «Ἡθελον δυνάμεως ἔχειν καὶ ὑπελθεῖν τὸν βίον τοῦτον, ἀλλὰ φοβοῦμαι τὸν πατέρα μου, ὅτι διὰ τὰ μάταια τοῦ βίου τούτου πράγματα βούλεται με ἐκδοῦναι ἀνδρί».

The text in ε is as follows:

Πάντα τοίνυν τὰ τοῦ μονήρους βίου περιεργασαμένη, λέγει τῷ ἀδελφῷ· «Ἡθελον δυνάμεως ἔχειν καὶ ὑπελθεῖν τὸν βίον τοῦτον»· καὶ ὁ μοναχὸς ἔφη· «καλὸς ὁ λογισμός». Καὶ ἡ κόρη εἶπεν· «ἀλλὰ φοβοῦμαι τὸν πατέρα μου, ὅτι διὰ τὰ μάταια τοῦ βίου τούτου πράγματα βούλεται με ἐκδοῦναι ἀνδρί».

The words ὁ μοναχὸς ἔφη· «καλὸς ὁ λογισμός». καὶ ἡ κόρη εἶπεν are only found in Translation C:

Omnia, quae solitariae uitae sunt, discutiens, ait fratri: «Velim uires habere et fugire uitam istam saecularem». Et monachus: «Optima cogitatio!» Et puella respondit: «Sed metuo patrem meum, quia pro uana huius negotia vult me uiro tradere».

A final example. Translation C is the only one to have, and amplify, an addition found uniquely in ε (8.7, post τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν μου):

Λέγει αὐτῇ ὁ γέρων· «καὶ τί θέλεις, ποιήσω σοι. τί βραδύνεις πρὸς τὴν σωτηρίαν;» ἡ δὲ λέγει αὐτῷ· «Ἄνα κατανύξῃ σε ὁ Θεὸς σῶσαι τὴν ψυχὴν μου καὶ ἀποθρίξαι με καὶ δοῦναι μοι τὸ ἄγιον σχῆμα».

See Translation C:

Cui respondit senex: «Si uoluntatis desiderium promptitas sequitur, quid morantes tardamus ad salutis pertingere portum?» Et illa ait: «Immitens compungat cor tuum Deus orare pro me, ut tuo interuentu saluetur anima mea. Nunc igitur, optime arbitratus pater, tonde me et da mihi sanctum habitum, quem per multorum annorum spatia anhelanter desidero.

Many other examples could be quoted. In any case, the model must stem from an exemplar prior to the loss of 12.8 ποῖος τόπος τὸ ἡλιόμορφον ἐκεῖνο ἔκρυψεν κάλλος, which occurred in a higher stemmatic position than that of the ancestor of ε' (= S S1 V F G).

THE TRANSLATOR'S TECHNIQUE

Translation C is, in most cases, ad verbum and, occasionally, very close to the original Greek text. For instance, in 6.1, πάντα οὖν τὰ τοῦ μονήρους βίου περιεργασμένη in β (which includes the ε source) is rendered into Latin as omnia quae solitariae uitae sunt discutiens, while Translation B, based on an identical Greek text, gives the more elegant omnem ergo perscrutans monachorum conuersationem. In 1.2, we have:

Hic accepit uxorem uenerabilem quandam et dignam suae uoluntatis, nobili et ipsam de genere existentem.

The text is surprising, especially nobili et ipsam de genere existentem – Mombrizio gives natam instead of existentem, although the translator uses existō elsewhere as equivalent of sum (see 7.7, 7.9). The Greek text, γ-family, which includes the ε-source, explains the Latin expression:

Οὗτος ἔλαβε γυναῖκα σεμνὴν καὶ ἀξίαν τῆς αὐτοῦ προαιρέσεως, γένους καὶ αὐτὴν οὖσαν ἐνδόξου.

As we find in the other cases, the fact that the author was translating ad verbum did not prevent him from adorning and expanding his text. For instance, in 14.3 he rendered the question θέλεις συντυχεῖν καλῷ ἀδελφῷ ἀπὸ τοῦ παλατίου τοῦ βασιλέως Θεοδοσίου ἐλθόντι; as uis colloqui cum fratri bonae scientiae perito et doctrinae illustri de palatio Theodosii? In 8.9 the senex who tonsures Euphrosyne makes a wish: Ὁ Θεός, ὁ σώσας πάντας τοὺς ἀγίους, αὐτός σε διαφυλάξει ἀπὸ τοῦ πονηροῦ. The author of the translation amplified the sentence substantially, changing the general tone:

Deus qui saluauit omnes sanctos quique mystica uoce proclamans dicit: «Nolo mortem peccatoris, sed ut conuertatur et uiuat.» Ipse sui regiminis in te ponat custodiam, filia, atque ab omni aduersarii eripiat gladio, ut, quae illi placita et nobis expetibilia sunt, peragentes soli Deo Patri et Deo nostro Iesu Christo ac Spiritui Sancto gratias referamus.

Interestingly, he added a quotation of Ezekiel 33.11 in a version quoted by patristic authors, such as Augustine and Cassiodorus<sup>20</sup>, which often appears in hagiographical literature<sup>21</sup>.

EDITIONS

Translation C was published for the first time by Bonino Mombrizio (1424-c. 500) in his Sanctuarium seu Vitae Sanctorum, printed in Milan shortly before 1480. The text is found in volume 1 under the title Vita sanctae Euphrosynae virginis (fols. 243r-4v). Mombrizio's model was most likely our M or a very similar copy<sup>22</sup>.

The text was republished in the Solesmes re-edition of 1910<sup>23</sup>. The editors collated Mombrizio's printed text with Rosweyde's edition, that is, Translation B (= BHL 2723). On p. 660, the editors propose a few emendations.

EDITORIAL PROCEDURES

The critical text is based on the collation of the manuscript copies identified so far. When there is disagreement between V and β, the Greek text usually provides some support to select the preferable reading. When the Greek source brings no help, I usually preferred V, for it is the earliest witness. I use standard orthography. This is a practical option, in face of the variety of spellings found in the manuscripts. Only the most interesting, and meaningful, spelling variants are given in the apparatus criticus (see above, pp. 61-2). The division of the text is the same used in the previous texts.

I am grateful to Renaud Alexandre, who called my attention to this example.

VI.
THE «LIFE OF CASTISSIMA»
(«BHL» 1640)

In the tenth century, a particular redaction of Translation A circulated in northern Spain, in the territories south of Burgos and neighbouring regions. We have already seen a different version of the same translation, our Redaction 1 (BHL 2722). In the following pages I shall refer to this Redaction 2 (BHL 1640) with its usual designation, Vita Castissimae, as found in the Bibliotheca Hagiographica Latina and in the bibliography.

The earliest traces of its existence go back to an anthology of female saints' Vitae, which most likely was a source of inspiration to, and enlightenment for, an aristocratic audience in the County of Castile, kingdom of León. In the eleventh century, the text was copied in a hagiographical collection meant to supplement an important passionary of the region, and in subsequent centuries it appeared occasionally in hagiographical compilations. As far as we can see, the text never circulated outside Iberia, and its diffusion is quite modest. Below I shall present the manuscripts used in the present edition, before examining the relationships between them and to their source.

THE MANUSCRIPTS

As noted above, the earliest evidence of the existence of this particular redaction is found in a hagiographical anthology compiled in the first half of the tenth century in the region of Burgos<sup>1</sup>. The anthology is composed of the following texts:

The Vita Castissimae survives in two of the three extant copies of this anthology.

1. El Escorial, Real Biblioteca del Monasterio de San Lorenzo, a-II-9, Part C (fols. 59-132) (= A)

s. X (a. 954), Castilian-Riojan region; 31 x 24 cm; 36 lines in two columns; owners: Jorge de Beteta Castilla y Cárdenas (1523-1590); San Lorenzo de El Escorial (1575)<sup>3</sup>.

The codex, beautifully decorated with coloured initials, was written by a certain John, who finished his work on 8 March 954, as indicated in the subscription (fol. 132v). It is without doubt a deluxe item made for a high-ranking female aristocrat or community in territory of the recently created County of Castile. Of the original book, we only have nine quaternions and a final ternion<sup>4</sup>. The original first leaf of the first quaternion is lost: presently, the

It consists of a particular version by John of Rome of Verba seniorum, 1.15 (ed. H. Rosweyde, Vitae Patrum, Antwerp 1615, pp. 646-7). It is the story of a young woman who must choose between the virtuous life of her father and the mundane life of her mother. This story is supplemented with a short excerpt of Ps.-Jerome's Breviarium in Psalmos (CPL 629), on psalm 38:14, and a small collection of aphoristic sentences, most of them belonging to Isidore's Synonyma, either quoted directly or drawn from a collection of gnomic sayings. The first section of the manuscript (fols. 2-3), originally from a different codex, presents Julian's Elogium Ildephonsi (BHL 3917); the second (fols. 4-58), also from a different manuscript, contains Ildefonsus' De uirginitate beatae Marie.

4. The ternion corresponds to fols. 130-5. After the subscription on fol. 132v, three folios first text, the Vita Constantinae, starts at tu ut video non disponis<sup>5</sup>. We have no means of knowing what might have preceded the surviving set of quires.<sup>6</sup>

The Vita Castissimae is on fols. 112v-16r, artfully displayed<sup>7</sup>. Unlike the other text of this collection (for instance, the Vita Constantinae), the margins of the Vitae Castissimae do not contain summaries of the contents. But there are two marginal notes: one is simply an emendation of the text; the other is an explanation. In chapter 15, when Paphnutius meets his daughter at the monastery without recognising her, a note says: ubi eam aspexit et ignorauat quia filia sua esset. The text is also divided into units of meaning, the words of the first line of each unit written in red ink with a large capital letter.

B was produced in the second half of the tenth century in the region south of Burgos, possibly at Silos. It was a period in which the scriptorium of the monastery, then dedicated to Saint Sebastian (later to Saint Dominic), was un-were left blank. A hand datable to the late tenth century added Braulio of Zaragoza's Life of Saint Aemilian, adding more folios to complete the work (fols. 136-41). The text ends abruptly due to the loss of the subsequent folios.

6. The quire signatures are not visible, so we do not know whether this was the final part of a codex of Valerius' hagiographical collection, as are the two other manuscripts.

7. The folio numbering is that marked in pencil. It corresponds to fols. 103v-7r of an earlier folio numbering.

It is recorded in the catalogue of Domingo Ibarreta (1710-1785) around 1770, and in that of Gregorio Hernández (1730-1795) of 1772, published in Boylan, The Library at Santo Domingo cit., p. 89 (Catalogue D, no. 7), p. 92 (Catalogue F, no. 1). der the influence of the style of Valeránica<sup>9</sup>. Adorned with beautifully decorated and coloured initials, it contains the hagiographical collection of Valerius of Bierzo. The last piece, the Vita Alexii (BHL 289), ends on the left-hand column of fol. 207r. On the right-hand column we have the title of the collection of female saints skilfully painted, followed by its index. Then comes the title of the first piece, which begins on the verso. The last text, the Vita Mariae Aegyptiacae, is incomplete, for some folios are lost. The Vita Castissimae is found on fols. 257r-61r.

A third extant copy of the anthology, named C by the editors of the Vita Constantinae, is Madrid, Biblioteca de la Real Academia de la Historia, cod. 13, Parts A+C (fols. 1-253 + 286-93). The codex contains Valerius of Bierzo's hagiographical compilation, and was produced in the second third of the tenth century in San Millán de la Cogolla. Its model must have come from the territory of León, specifically the region of Castile. As in the case of B, the anthology was copied after Valerius' anthology. Unfortunately, only the first quaternion survives, offering the beginning of the Vita Constantinae<sup>10</sup>.

Fàbregas Grau, Pasionario Hispánico (siglos VII-XI), Madrid and Barcelona 1953 (Monumenta Hispana Sacra, Serie Litúrgica 6), vol. 1, pp. 240-5; Martín-Iglesias, Códices hagiográficos, p. 328. In the sixteenth century, Ambrosio de Morales examined the codex at the monastery of Cardeña: Divi Eulogii Cordubensis ... opera, Alcalá de Henares 1574, fol. 112r. Based on a marginal note on fol. 30v, preceding the Passio Nunilonis et Alodiae, martyred in Huesca in c. 842/851, Manuel Díaz y Díaz suggested that the model, or rather one of the models, of Eb should be dated to some time before 982: La Pasión de San Pelayo y su difusión, p. 102. Former shelfmark: «I. H. 8. 9».

This legendary produced in the eleventh century was used as a supplement to Endura's passionary (London, add. 25600). This is shown by the numbering of the folios and of the texts<sup>12</sup>. Most likely, the very purpose of this collection was precisely to assemble texts missing from Endura's passionary and required by the new liturgical needs of the time<sup>13</sup>. The texts are not arranged per circulum anni, but by accumulation.

The Vita Castissimae was copied at the end of the collection, on fols. 262r-5v, with no indication of the liturgical date. It ends abruptly at 14.3 de palatio Theodosii. The subsequent folios are lost.

4. Toledo, Archivo y Biblioteca Capitulares, 44-11 (= T)

s. XIII, Toledo; 264 fols., 59 × 38.5 cm; 40 lines in two columns; owners: Cathedral of Toledo<sup>14</sup>.

The manuscript contains two annual cycles, copied one after the other. First, on fols. 1-126v, we have a passionary per circulum anni, from 17 November (Acisclus and Victoria) to 1 November (Passio Saturnini). At the end is appended the Passio Christinae, celebrated on 26 July in early medieval Spain. Then, on fols. 130r-241v, we find a second annual cycle, from 28 November (Caprasius of Agen, a common feature in the early medieval Hispanic liturgy) to 30 October (Marcellus of Tangier). After this piece, we have a supplement of thirteen texts on saints of various dates, the first being Claudius, Asterius, and companions (23 August), followed by Longinus of Cappadocia (21 November in the early medieval Spanish liturgy). Four saints of December form a short sequence.

The Vita Castissimae is the last piece of this supplement (fol. 260r-2v). Once again, there is no liturgical date. Among the models of this huge hagigraphical manuscript, the scribes used passionaries of the Castilian territory, such as those of San Pedro de Cardeña, Endura's passionary (London add. 25600), and its complement, our Eb. T is precisely a copy of Eb, as we shall see below. Nevertheless, it is a valuable witness, because it was produced before the loss of a number of folios in Eb, which left the text truncated<sup>15</sup>.

12. The passions are numbered LIII to CXVII (the last text of London add. 25600, the Passio Innumerabilem Caesaraugstanorum, is numbered LIII). The thirteenth-century foliation is from CCLXVIII to DLX (the final folio of add. 25600 is numbered CCLXVII). The passions in add. 25600 and Eb were numbered before the late eleventh century, when the current final quaternion was added.

A copy of the Vita Castissimae modelled on T is found in Bernardo of Brihuega's Vitae sanctorum. It survives in Salamanca, Biblioteca Histórica Universitaria, 2538 (fols. 337v-9r), a manuscript of the late fourteenth or early fifteenth century, once owned by the Colegio Mayor de San Bartolomé, Salamanca, which contains a large portion of Brihuega's book 3 (fols. 1r-224v) and a section of book 5 (fols. 224v-355v). It has been very thoroughly described by José Carlos Martín-Iglesias<sup>16</sup>. That T is the model of Brihuega is clear: it bears every single error, omission, and addition present in T, and not a single reading that improves on T. Interestingly, Bernardo of Brihuega was also acquainted with the anthology of female saints' lives mentioned above. He copied most of the lives from Paris näl 2178 (our B)<sup>17</sup>. However, as for the Vita Castissimae, he preferred to use T as his model.

THE TRANSMISSION OF THE TEXT

The earliest evidence of the existence of this particular version of the Vita Euphrosynae is found in the above-mentioned anthology compiled in the tenth century. As we have seen, it survives in two beautifully decorated manuscripts (A and B) produced in the area of Burgos for some high-ranking commissioner, possibly a member of the Leonese court or the new aristocracy of Castile. Unfortunately, the quaternions containing the Vita in a third contemporaneous copy mentioned above (Madrid, Biblioteca de la Real Academia de la Historia, 13, Parts A+C), are lost.

In the eleventh century, in this very same region, the Vita Euphrosynae was incorporated at the end of a hagiographical collection (Eb), intended to sup-

15. Already a sixteenth-century note on fol. 167v (Passio Pelagii) states that the manuscript was collated with Eb.

17. Brihuega incorporated: Vita Heliae (fols. 300v-2r), Vita Melaniae iunioris (fols. 312r-23v), Vita cuiusdam sancte uirginis (fols. 323v-4r), Valerius of Bierzo's Epistula beatissimae Egeriae laude conscripta (fols. 324v-5va), Vita Mariae Aegyptiacae (fols. 325v-31r), Vita Constantinae (fols. 339r-46v).

plement the most important passionary produced in the monasteries of Castile County: London, British Library, add. 25600, the passionary copied by Endura in the monastery of San Pedro de Cardeña, in the days of Fernán González, count of Castile (932-969/970).

Finally, in the thirteenth century a copy of Eb was produced in Toledo (T). From T, the text was incorporated into Bernardo of Brihuega's Vitae sanctorum.

A and B present almost identical texts: the same layout, division of the text, and omissions. A number of readings suggest that both derive independently from the same source text. For instance:

	BHL 2722	BHL 1640	A
	B Eb (up to 14.3) T
1.4	nocte ac die	nocte et die	die hac nocte

17.3	dignare	dignare	digna
19.2	abbas uelociter	abbas uelociter	uelociter abbas

As we can see, the evidence is scarce, but it is unlikely that all these minor details can be put down to simple coincidence. And when we consider the other texts of the anthology, we reach a certain degree of confidence that B is not a copy of A<sup>18</sup>.

It is possible that Eb derives from a model in a higher stemmatic position than A B. However, the evidence is limited. See, for instance:

On the other hand, it is also a highly reworked text. See the beginning of chapter 13:

<sup>1</sup> Dum non potuit dolores supportare, Pafnutius ambulauit ad ipsum monasterium, ubi erat filia sua, et prosternens se ad pedes beati abbatis dixit: «Rogo te, pater, ne obliuiscaris mei; attentissime ora pro me peccatore, ut inueniam fructum orationum tuarum; imparuit enim filia mea». <sup>2</sup> Audiens haec, abbas tristis effectus est et iussit sonari signum ut omnes fratres de cellulis eorum congregarentur in ecclesia. Et dixit illis. <sup>3</sup> «Rogo uos, fratres, laborem sustinete unam septimanam et ieunate ac Deum deprecare nobiscum».

which reads in Eb and T:

<sup>1</sup> Quum uero non potuisset dolorem filiae sustinere, Pafnutius perrexit ad ipsum monasterium, ubi erat filia eius, et prosternens se ad pedes beati abbatis dixit: «Obsecro te, pater sanctissime, ut mei miserearis, quoniam filia unica, quam mihi Deus sacris tuis atque tuorum fratrum orationibus olim postulatus dederat, nunc grauiter doleo amissam, quando nec uiuentem uideo nec mortuam mihi datur tradere sepulcro. Propter quod nunc precor ut Dei exoretis clementiam. Forsitan, uobis orantibus, ostendere mihi eam dignabitur Dominus». <sup>2</sup> Talibus igitur uerbis abbas commotus, conuocatis sic ait fratribus: <sup>3</sup> «Rogo uos, fratres, ut in spatio unius septimanae laborem ieunii sustineatis ac Deum simul deprecemur».

T is clearly a codex descriptus of Eb. It replicates all the errors of Eb and does not, beyond any reasonable doubt, offer any better reading than Eb.

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE «VITA CASTISSIMAE» AND TRANSLATION A, REDACTION I

That the Vita Castissimae is a particular version of Translation A, and not a different translation from the same Greek model, is demonstrated by a huge number of passages that are identical in these Latin texts. A few examples:

	Greek text	Redaction 1	Vita Castissimae
1.5	ὅμοιώς δὲ καὶ ὁ ἀνὴρ αὐτῆς περιερχόμενος	similiter et uir suus circuibat monasteria et sancta loca	similiter et uir suus circuibat monasteria et sancta loca
2.5	ὅτι ἦν ἀστεια τῷ Θεῷ καὶ ὥραια τῇ ὄψει καὶ καλῇ τῷ εἰδεῖ σφόδρᾳ	dum decora erat ualde in forma et patiens in conuersatione.	dum erat decora ualde in forma et patiens in conuersatione.
7.2	τὰ μνημόσυνα τοῦ πατρὸς τῆς μονῆς εἰσιν.	dedicatio est monasterii nostri	dedicatio est monasterii nostri
7.5	ἰδού τις γέρων ἐκ τῆς Σκήτεως ἐλθὼν τὸ ἐργόχειρον αὐτοῦ ἐπώλει.	inuentus est ibidem unus sex seruus Dei orans adtentissime in ipsa ecclesia	inuentus est ibidem unus sex seruus Dei orans adtentissime in ipsa ecclesia

14.5, 8	καὶ λαβών αὐτόν, ὁ Ἀγάπιος ἀπίγαγεν πρὸς αὐτόν.	duxitque illum ad fenestram. 7 <sup>b</sup> Et ille non potuit recognoscere filiam suam, dum de nimia afflictione carnis suae fuerat afflita <sup>8</sup> et cooperiebat se de cuculla, ut nullum signum pater suus uidere potuisset in ea.	duxitque illum ad fenestram. 7 <sup>b</sup> Et uidit filiam suam et non cognovit eam prae nimia afflictione carnis suae, quia fuerat ulde afflita in nimiis ieuniis atque orationibus <sup>8</sup> et quo operiebat se de cuculla, ut non cognosceret eam pater suus.

Furthermore, they present the same sentences absent from the Greek model. For instance, they have the same additional information about the tradition of the nuns being tonsured (6.4): dum in Oriente consuetudo est monachas tondere capillos sicut et uiros.

It is difficult to demonstrate beyond any reasonable doubt which line of transmission the Vita Castissimae stems from. The text is very heavily re-worked, which may obscure many significant clues. In any case, a number of details in the extant witnesses suggest that its ancestor was closer to the line of R Es P U (1.1-12.2). Some of these details are:

	BHL 2772	BHL 2772 ( R Es (18.5-21.5) P U (1.1-12.2)) + BHL 1640
1.3	exitum	obitum
4.5	homines	omnes (also Ba)
6.5	perinquire (perquire Ba Ro D)	inquire
8.1	propriae animae	propriae animae suae
9.9	offerо omnia	offerо tibi omnia (offerо tibi Ba)
10.2	solus non potes consistere	non potes consistere solus
10.2	ordinem monasticum	ordinem monasterii
10.3	facio	faciam
13.6	pro hoc	propter hoc
13.7	abscondidit	abscondit (also Ba)
14.4	dominum (hominem Ba D)	amicum
19.4	cum grandi reuerentia	cum magna reuerentia
20.1	de fratribus	ex fratribus
20.2	monimen (monumentum D)	hominem (also Ba)

The evidence is meagre, but it is not certain that all these minor details can be put down to simple coincidence. A fact is that this line of transmission of Redaction 1 circulated in tenth-century Spain: U is precisely an exemplar produced in Córdoba in the second quarter of the tenth century. Other exemplars may have circulated<sup>19</sup>. Therefore, for the time being, this is a hypothesis.

19. In 5.4, the Vita Castissima offers the correct number of monks. This may mean that its

The relationships between copies of the Vita Castissimae can roughly be represented as follows:

THE AUTHOR'S TECHNIQUE

The Vita Castissimae is shorter than its model by about 30 per cent. For instance, in 1.3, Redaction 1 reads:

Vir autem suus in grandi tribulatione erat. Dum diuitiae erant illi, non sperabat dimittere posteros, ut suam substantiam post exitum eorum bene disponeretur.

The Vita Castissimae condenses this into a short line:

model was in a higher stemmatic position in regard to the ancestor of R Es P U, or that it was emended. There are very few indications that the Vita Castissimae descends from a model in a higher stemmatic position than the ancestor of the extant copies of Redaction 1, this is, BHL 2722. One of the passages which could suggest such a model is the following. In 4.7, the Greek text has δεῦρο, πάτερ πνευματικέ, πρὸς τὴν δούλην σου, ἵνα σε προσκυνήσῃ [...] διὰ ἀπελθεῖν θέλομεν ἐν τῇ πόλει, while Redaction 1 reads pater bone, uide ancillam tuam, filiam meam, quia ualedicere uolumus, and the Vita Castissima presents pater bone, uide ancillam tuam, filiam meam, quia quaerimus descendere ad civitatem. No other passage offers a similar clue, which is an interesting indication in a text of this length. It is not impossible that the author of the Vita Castissimae introduced the causal clause corresponding to the Greek text on his own initiative or following a lost model preserving the sentence of the Greek text (for instance, a descendant of an ancestor of R Es P U). Indeed, the eleventh-century corrector of M, a major witness of Redaction 1, added a very similar phrase above the line, uolumus descendere in domo, again either on his own initiative or based on a more complete, and now-lost exemplar of Redaction 1.

Pafnutius uero tribulabatur eo quod erat diues et non habebat filios.

Sometimes, the purpose of abridging the text led the author to commit mistakes and to mislead the reader. If it is not just a mechanical loss, an example could be 16.2-4, where Pafnutius visits his daughter at the monastery for the last time:

Venit autem tunc pater suus ad monasterium et dixit abbati: «Si iubes, domine, uideam Smaragdum, quia satis diligit illum anima mea». <sup>3</sup> Et iussit abbas et uidit illum. <sup>4</sup> Intrauerunt Agapius et Pafnutius et uisitauerunt eam.

The sentence et iussit abbas et uidit illum is puzzling, but Redaction 1 clarifies:

If we are not acquainted with the source text, the sentence in the Vita Castissimae is nonsensical.

Sometimes, the author introduced elements which render the text faulty. In 12.4, Redaction 1 reads:

Statim directi sunt in omnem patriam quaerere beatam puellam et non solum naues maris, sed et de Nilo fluuio detentae sunt. Et exquaerebantur domi, monasteria, cauernae; et quod quaerebant non inueniebatur.

The corresponding passage in the Vita Castissimae is as follows:

Statim direxerunt missos in omnes regiones et non solum naues maris, sed et Nili fluuia et cauernas et speluncas et monasteria uirorum et mulierum: inquirentes non inuenierunt eam.

There are a number of inconsistencies and redundancies here. The phrase non solum naues maris sed et Nilia fluuia is awkward; cauernas et speluncas is an unnecessary repetition. But see specially monasteria uirorum et mulierum: the phrase monasteria uirorum is clearly rhetorical and inaccurate. This is precisely the reason why they did not find Euphrosyne: because they did not search in male monasteries.

The purpose of abridging the model did not prevent the author from amplifying the text whenever he felt it appropriate. For instance, in 17.3, when Euphrosyne reveals her identity to her father, Redaction 1 has a short statement:

Ego sum paupera et peccatrix quam quaeris, ecce uide et satisfactum tibi sit!

The author of the Vita Castissimae decided to amplify the moment and give it an emotional tone:

Ego sum paupera et peccatrix, quae pro amore Christi mundum omnem cum deliciis suis respui tamquam stercora. Christus autem tam idoneus mihi extitit, ut et uictricem libidinum et omnes pollutiones a me euadere fecit pro misericordiam suam, cui credo me usque ad hanc horam sine macula permansuram. Ecce uide me et satisfac tibi!

EDITIONS

The Vita Castissimae was first published in 1909 by Guillermo Antolín y Pajares (1873–1928), the Augustinian scholar of San Lorenzo de El Escorial, author of the well-known catalogue of its manuscripts. In a long article printed in the Boletín de la Real Academia de la Historia, Antolín reproduced the text he had found in El Escorial a-II-9, our A<sup>20</sup>.

More recently, Valeriano Yarza Urquiola included the Vita in volume 2 of his Passionarium Hispanicum. He used our four manuscripts: A B Eb T. In volume 1, Yarza presents a short introduction to the text, comprising a summary of its contents. It is not clear why he included this Vita in an edition of the so-called Passionarium Hispanicum, once the text is absent from all manuscripts usually associated with the hagiographical collections per anni circulum which circulated in northern Spain since the tenth century, except our Es, in which the Vita appears at the very end of the anthology composed by accumulation and with no indication of the liturgical date. Also, his proposal about Euphrosyne's feast day in the Hispanic liturgy of the eleventh century (if she ever had a feast day in medieval Spain) requires explanation<sup>21</sup>.

EDITORIAL PROCEDURES

In the present text, I use the same chapter and other textual units used in the preceding texts<sup>22</sup>. Since this is an abridged version, the result is sometimes unbalanced. But, even so, this appeared to be the best solution in order to avoid different reference systems among versions. As for spelling variants, 20. Guillermo Antolín y Pajares, Estudios de códices visigodos: Códice a. ii 9. de la biblioteca del Escorial, «Boletín de la Real Academia de la Historia», 54 (1909), pp. 55–67, 117–28, 204–46, 265–315. The Vita Castissimae is on pp. 271–9.

21. Yarza, Passionarium Hispanicum cit., pp. 1333–45 (the introduction to the text is in vol. 1, pp. 261–4). The author states that the liturgical date of Saint Castissima in early medieval Spain was 15 September. No evidence is given to the reader.

22. The author of this version did not include 20.3 and 21.3, in addition to the omission of 2.3 in Translation A, Redaction 1, the position of 14.8 (between 14.5 and 14.6 in Translation A), and 14.7 divided in two parts.

I only incorporated the most meaningful into the apparatus criticus (see above pp. 61–2).

As we have seen, A and B present the earliest form of this version, as confirmed by the other recension of the same translation, this is, Translation A. Naturally, this is the basis of our text. Eb presents a later and very reworked text. But since it descends from a model in a higher stemmatic position than that of the ancestor A and B, it presents better readings in a few cases. T is a codex descriptus of Eb. Nevertheless, I have included its variants in the apparatus criticus, since Eb is missing the text after chapter 14 due to the loss of the subsequent leaves, and in many places the edges of the surviving folios have been cut off, meaning that some sentences and words are lost. T is thus taken as representative of the missing text in Eb. For reasons of clarity and coherence, all variants of T – not only those in the missing parts of Eb – are given.

Vita sanctae Eufrosinae
quae interpretatur in Latino Castissima

[1.] <sup>1</sup>Fuit in Alexandria ciuitate uir magnificus, nomine Pafnutius, curam habens pauperum et continentiam. <sup>2</sup>Verum tamen ipse duxit coniugem christianissimam de gente alta; sterilis inuenta est. <sup>3</sup>Vir autem suus in grandi tribulatione erat. Dum diuitiae erant illi, non sperabat dimittere posteros, ut suam substantiam post exitum eorum bene

Vita sanctae Eufrosinae uirginis

Vita sanctae Castissimae uirginis

Et offerens quingentos solidos, rogauit abbatem ut eos susciperet et dispensaret. Ita et fecit. <sup>4</sup>Dixitque abbas ad monachum nomine Agapium: <sup>5</sup>«Suscipte istum iuuensem et, sicut filium, sic tibi eum commendabo. Doce illum sicut pater bonus et sic certa praeparare illum, ut, si potest fieri, supereret magistrum». <sup>6</sup>Et, congregatis uniuersis fratribus, orauerunt pro constantia Smaragdi.

AN ANONYMOUS «VITA SANCTAE EUPHROSYNAE» IN A MONTECASSINO MANUSCRIPT

In an eleventh-century assemblage of saint's lives belonging to an ascetic framework copied at Montecassino, there is a peculiar version of the Vita Euphrosynae (BHL 2724). This version is neither a translation of the Greek bios nor a version of the existent Latin translations, but a new anonymous text. The author wrote his own version of the story of Euphrosyne, using as source an exemplar of Translation B, the most widely known Latin version<sup>1</sup>. In Paolo Chiesa's terms, this new text belongs to the tradizione of the Latin translation, not to its trasmissione<sup>2</sup>, and provides a good example of a text derived from another.

It is a very simplified version. Several episodes have been omitted or reduced to a single sentence. Most dialogues and Euphrosyne's reflections are ignored. All biblical quotations found in the previous texts are omitted. In contrast, the author amplified a few episodes. For instance, Paphnutius' monologue confronting the disclosure of the truth and his daughter's death is highly elaborated, and in a peculiar way. The most surprising feature in this section is the prominence of Paphnutius' suffering and a certain recrimination of Euphrosyne's actions, based on lies and deception (18):

O crudelis, o pessima, o omni humanitate deserta! O saxeum pectus, o animum adamantinum! Per triginta et octo annos posset pati patrem angustiari, conteri, tribulari, cum uno omnes posset uerbo eius perturbationes sedare.

Interestingly, all considerations based on Luke 14.33, the foundation of the whole story of Euphrosyne, and the justification for her choice of a life of deception, are omitted. The author has a different view of Euphrosyne's story.

The text is written in a rhetorical style. See, for instance, the typical address to the reader (19):

1. For instance: the territory in which Paphnutius' men search for Euphrosyne is Alexandria and Egypt; the celebration at the monastery is the anniversary of the abbot's ordinatio; the name of Euphrosyne's tutor is Agapitus.

2. P. Chiesa, Elementi di critica testuale, Bologna 2002 (Testi e manuali per l'insegnamento universitario del latino 72), p. 35.

Quantus autem tunc stupor quantaque mentis hebetudo corripuerit uniuersos, quae fuerit p[re]a immensitate stuporis et gaudii inundatio lacrimarum in oculis cunctorum astantium, melius silentio nostro cogitandum lectori considerandumque relinquimus.

The Vita is found in Montecassino, Archivio dell'Abbazia, 140<sup>3</sup>. According to Francis Newton, the manuscript was produced at Montecassino during the abbacy of Desiderius (1058–1105), perhaps in the second half of the 1070s or a little later. Giulia Orofino considered that it was written between 1071 and 1087<sup>4</sup>. Measuring about 38.5 × 24.5 cm, and comprising 586 pages<sup>5</sup>, it was copied by a Beneventan hand in two columns of twenty-eighth lines.

The manuscript contains a collection of Vitae usually found in monastic and ascetic contexts. First, Jerome's Vita Pauli Thebæi (pp. 1–14, BHL 6596), truncated at the beginning<sup>6</sup>, followed by Evagrius' Vita Antonii (pp. 15–119, BHL 609)<sup>7</sup>. Then, we have book 1 of the Vita Romani Autisiodorensis abbatis (pp. 119–40; BHL 7305), the Vita Euphrosynae (pp. 140–56; BHL 2724), and Jerome's Vita Hilarionis and Vita Malchi (pp. 157–200 and 200–12; BHL 3879, 5190). This last is followed by Sulpicius Severus' Dialogi (pp. 212–308, BHL 5614–16), and the Vita Sabae (pp. 308–46; BHL 7406). After this, we

Vita sanctae Euphrosinae

[1.] Fuit uir quidam in Alexandria Paphnutius nomine, diues ualde et honorabilis Deumque uehementer timens. Hic accepit uxorem satis sibi et claritate generis et morum honestate consimilem. Qui, cum per annos plurimos coherentes nec filium sibi nec filiam a Domino concedi consiperent, dolebant grauiter multasque incessanter indigentibus elemosinas largientes pro concessione filii seu filiae indesinentibus misericordiam Domini precibus flagitabant. Et, ubicumque Paphnutius Dei audiebat famulum remorari, adibat eum preceque instantissima deposcebat ut pro sterilitate uxorius Dei dignaretur clementiam postulare. Vnde factum est ut ad abbatem quandam deuerteret mirae sanctitatis et famae, qui trecentorum quinquaginta fratrum congregationis gerebat custodiam.

[2.] Magnaque munera sancto deferens loco, obnixa tandem et humili supplicatione hoc a patre congregationis illius impetrare promeruit ut tam ipse quam congregatio uniuersa pro adimpleteione desiderii sui ieuniis et obsecratione instanti Domini pulsarent clementiam. Exaudiuitque Deus preces seruorum suorum filiamque concessit Paphnutio. Quae, cum septem facta esset annorum, baptizata est impositumque ei nomen est Euphrosina.

[3.] Duodecim autem cum consumasset annos, defuncta est mater eius. Porro puella proficiebat sapientia et aetate, et parilitate morum defunctam in sese matrem uiuere demonstrabat. Erat autem speciosa nimis forma et decora facie, qua capti nobiliores iuuenes ciuitatis eam sibi a patre singuli in coniugem postulabant. Cum igitur decem et octo annorum curricula complessset aetatis, a patre adolescenti illustrissimo despontata est Alexandriae.

[4.] Detulitque eam benedicendam pater ad abbatem, cuius eam a Domino orationibus promeruerat, pecuniam secum non modicam fratum profuturam necessitatibus deferens. Cum autem puellam abbas in xenodochio coenobii recipi praecepisset, sermonem ei aedificationis et salutis in partem aliquam diei protraxit, orationeque ad Deum fusa. Cum benedixisset ei, in monasterii sese interiora recepit. Puella autem cum patre tridui spatio in xenodochio remorata est. Audiensque in ymnis et psalmis et canticis spiritualibus fratres creatori laudes summa deuotione in ecclesia sedulo persoluentes, mirae in eorum uocibus suauitatis dulcedine replebatur, gemebatque et suspirabat dicens in semetipsa: «O bone Ihesu, quam felices ego quam beatos istos iudico seruos tuos, qui in terris adhuc degentes uitam merentur ducere angelorum tibique incessanter ferre laudum concinnentes praeconia, quod in futura felicitate electi omnes in perpetuum creduntur acturi isti in carne adhuc fragili constituti dies ac noctes agere non desistunt. O quanta me credarem felicitate beatam, si mihi uia aliqua panderetur diuinitus per quam ad horum mererer consortium peruenire». Haec et huiuscemodi multa per triduum, quo illic commorata est, mente uoluens ut sibi semita panderetur salutis, diuinam non cessabat clementiam implorare.

Peracto igitur triduo, cum disponeret cum filia redire, Paphnutius adiuit monasterii patrem, rogans eum et obsecrans ut filiam iterum dignaretur reuisere suarumque orationum fructum iterum benedicere sicque demum redeundi utrisque licentiam contribuere. Cum igitur ad Euphrosinam abbas uenisset confestim, sese ad pedes eius puella proiecit, orans et deprecans ut quae illius esset orationibus genita eius quoque in perpetuum orationibus seruaretur. Extensis itaque manibus, benedicens puellam abbas Christoque Domino patrem pariter commendans et filiam, abeundi utrisque concedit licentiam. Porro de puellae animo, quae semel fuerant inspirata diuinitus, salutis desideria non ultra potuisse excidere unde ut ad effectum perducerentur ocius. Eum, cui nihil nouerat impossibile, sedulis non cessabat precibus inuocare. Pater autem eius, sicubi Dei famulum repperisset, instabat precibus ut eum duceret ad puellam benedictionem super eam et orationem pariter largiturum, laborabatque nisibus uniuersis ut, quam seruorum Dei habere orationibus promeruerat, seruorum quoque Dei seruari orationibus mereretur.

[5.] Paucis interiectis diebus, postquam a memorato coenobio sunt reuersi, diem anniuersariam ordinationis suae saepe iam dictus abbas celebratus misit quandam de fratribus ad Paphnutium, rogans eum ut natalicium illum ordinationis suae diem cum fratribus festium haberet. Forte autem, cum domum eius delegatus ingressus est frater, Paphnutius deerat. Tunc puella, uocans ad se Dei famulum, coepit ab eo perquirere fratrum numerum qui in eius coenobio morarentur. Cumque eos trecentos et quinquaginta esse respondisset, adiecit perquiendo puella utrum in una ecclesia omnes pariter psallerent et utrum aequali omnes abstinentia ieunarent. Cumque ille omnes quidem in una pariter ecclesia psallere respondisset, non autem pari omnes abstinentia ieunare, sed unumquemque pro uiribus sibi collatis diuinitus.

[6.] Subiunxit puella se ardentissimo flagrare desiderio ut, si qua uia posset, relictis ineptiis mundi huius, diuinæ sese dumtaxat subderet seruituti. Sed si monasterium puellare adiret, timere se ne perquisita tandem et inuenta a patre seu sposo ui illata exinde cogeretur exire. Seruorum uero Dei qualiter posset congregationi misceri sese fatebatur nescire. Tunc seruus ille Dei eius, per uerba animum erga Deum ardentissimum recognoscens, id ei consilii contulit, ut, cum pater eius cum abbatे remorans suo absens per triduum futurus esset, ipsa ad se interim seruorum Dei aliquem per internuntium euocaret cui suum in fide secretum committeret, atque ab eo ut comam abscideret capit is uestemque ei sancti indueret habitus postularet, sicque per tonsuram uestisque mutationem uirum simulans ad aliquam seruorum Dei congregationem deuerteret, cum quibus usque in finem archanum nemini committens suum celata posset omnibus et absconsa manere. Quod cum puellæ quasi demissum caelitus consilium nimium placuisset, Deo et fratri illi super tantæ salubritatis consilio gratias coepit copiosas referre.

[7-8.] Dum super his et huiusmodi sermo uoluitur, uenit Paphnutius. Cui cum missus frater legationem retulisset abbatis, nulla interposita mora, arripit cum eo ad monasterium iter. Puella interim non fuit segnis fratris explere consilium. Missusque a puella nuntius, qui ad sese monachorum quempiam euocaret, dispositione Dei, ut creditur, religioso cui-dam intereundum monacho obuiauit, suas tendendi pro monachorum more reculas in ciuitate uenundare. Hic igitur, cum deductus fuisset ad uirginem, totum eius pectoris commisit archanum. Quid multa? Tonsa est per manus eius tunicaque sancti induita habitus.

[9.] Nocte autem insecuta, muliebribus cunctis exuta uestibus, uirilibus indumentis induitur. Sumptisque quingentis solidis, ad monasterium saepe superius memoratum progreditur. Abbatique per ianitorem legauit, quod eunuchus quidam de palatio p[re]foribus staret, qui cum eo quaedam conferenda haberet. Egressus igitur abbas, cum, facta oratione, residens eam quoque considere iussisset, sciscitatur quisnam sit, cuiusque rei gratia ad eum fatigium sumpserit. Quae respondit eunuchum palatinum se esse seque illuc ea de causa uenisse ut ipse eum, si Domini uoluntas existeret, suis dignaretur spiritualibus filiis aggregare seque multas habere pecunias, quae demum ad ipsum essent monasterium deferendae.

[10.] Cuius cum nomen abbas interrogasset, Smaragdum se uocari respondit. Cum autem eius abbas petitioni tribuisse assensum, protulit puella quingentos, quos secum detulerat, solidos tradiditque abbati dicens: «Hos paucos interim, pater, solidos, ne dedigneris accipere. Certus et indubius, si mihi Dominus dederit, ut inter uos ualeam conuersari huic sancto loco multa per me et magna alia largienda. Accipiens igitur eunuchum, qui putabatur abbas, monacho eum cuidam Agapito nomine monasticis tradidit studiis imbuendum.

[11.] Tantus autem erat Smaragdi decor, ut per eum infirmorum quorundam fratrum mentibus temptationis scandalum gigneretur. Quo comperto, abbas p[re]acepit ut Smaragdo pararetur cella, in qua solus remorari deberet. Quod Smaragdus, ouanter amplexus, sedebat in cella solitarius uigiliisque ieconiis et orationibus studium indesinenter impendens.

[12.] Paphnutius autem reuersus domum, cum fugam filiae compresisset, misit legatos primo ad sponsi domum, percontans si forte eo uel sponte uel ui rapta uenisset. Cumque sponsus et sacer tristes uehementer effecti eam illuc minime uenisse responderent, mittuntur legati continuo, quorum alii equis alii nauigio discurrentes per totam eam Alexandriam et Aegyptum perquirerent. Qui, cum omnes casso desudassent labore, pater nullam poterat uel ad horam animo quietem admittere, iuges lacrimas et uoces eiulatus indesinenter emittens.

[13.] Illudque postremo maestissimo pectori accurrit consilium, ut abbatem illum sanctum saepe superius memoratum adiret, eiusque sibi orationibus restitui filiam postularet, quam eius sese meminerat orationibus genuisse. Cum autem per dierum ebdomadam, tam abbate quam fratribus uniuersis ieuniis et orationi instantibus, nulla cuiuis de Eu-phrosina reuelatio extisset, uocauit ad se Paphnutium abbas eique constanter asseruit salubri se puellam tradidisse proposito. Et propterea nihil de ea fratribus reuelatum, quod eius e contrario ad Deum indesinens esset oratio, ne eam reuelari concedat. «Ne tu», inquiens, «fortassis eam, si reuelata foret, a sanctis, quibus procul dubio uacat studiis, uiolentia irrogata conareris auertere». Per haec igitur et huiusmodi uerba consolatum aliquantulum dimisit hominem.

[14.] Qui cum crebro gratia consolationis monasterium uiseret, sciens abbas sapientiam et sanctitatem Smaragdi eunuchi, quadam die misit ad eum Paphnutium consolationem per eius colloquia recepturum.

[15.] Tunc Smaragdus in haec uerba coepit adhortari Paphnutium: «Non est qui credat, frater Paphnuti, animum te maestissimum gere-re, quippe qui filiam perdideris unicam et quam de sterili coniuge sanctorum accipere orationibus meruisti. Verumtamen ad memoriam debes, frater dilectissime, reuocare Abraham filium, quem centenarius de nonagenaria uxore acceperat. Cum sibi eum Dominus immolari praeciperet, nullam prae-tendisse uultu, nullam animo gessisse tristitiam. Non credens iustum esse tristitiam causam si ille acciperet filium qui donauerat, quanto magis tu omnem ab animo debes propul-sare maerorem, cuius filiam non sibi Dominus immolari praecepit, sed uiuentem eam ad meliorem partem sua inspiratione pertraxit. Hoc enim tametsi ex relatione sancti patris huius monasterii certum habeas. Me tamen etiam cohortante, uolo ut nullatenus debeas dubitare

15. Abraham ... tristitiam Gn 22.1-14

filiam tuam sanctum elegisse propositum et ob hanc causam nihil de ea uel sancto patri nostro uel sanctis fratribus reuelatum. Noli igitur, uir bone, deficere a disciplina Domini, nec fatigeris cum ab eo argueris. Quem enim diligit Dominus corripit, flagellat autem omnem filium quem recipit. Magis autem illa sancti Iob uerba tuo sedulo uersentur in animo, si bona suscepimus de manu Domini, mala quare non sustineamus? Dominus dedit, Dominus abstulit, sicut Domino placuit ita factum est: sit nomen Domini benedictum. Vincat igitur in tuo pectore amorem filiae amor Dei, neque doleas largitorem eam recepisse quam dederit, confidens de eiusdem clementia quod si patienter ad tempus pro eo feras absentiam filiae, prius te eo miserante uisurum ipsam, quam hac uita demigres».

Per haec et huiusmodi miris Smaragdus consolationibus animum refouit Paphnutii. Non potuit autem Paphnutius in Smaragdo aliqua signa filiae deprehendere, non solum propterea quia nulla ei de talibus poterat inesse suspicio et quia eius facies mira abstinentia oppalluerat, sed ob id maxime quoniam tota fere facie obducta cucullo cum ipso loquebatur. Frequentabat uero Smaragdi cellam Paphnutius, magnam semper de filia in eius uerbis consolationem recipiens.

[16.] Cum autem triginta et octo annos in cella consummasset Euphrosina, languore graui moritura corripitur. Ad quam cum Paphnutius uisitationis uenisset causa, rogatus ab ea est ut se per triduum non dimitteret.

[17.] Cum uero tertia uenisset dies in qua sese Euphrosina ad Dominum nouerat migraturam, uocauit ad se patrem eumque in haec uerba alloquitur. «Diem mortis meae, pater Paphnuti, conspicis imminere, neque praeter te mortalium quempiam ultra uel alloquar uel uidebo. De reliquo, reposita est mihi corona iustitiae, quam reddet mihi Dominus in illa die iustus iudex. Vnde non est archanum meum tibi ulterius obtegendum nec tua, pater, amplius consolatio differenda. Procul igitur pelle ab animo maerorem omnem meque tuam filiam Euphrasinam sanctorum a Domino imperata orationibus recognosce. Non esta passa Creatoris infinita clementia sanctorum orationum fructum spirituum patere morsibus immunitorum, nec eam permisit maculari spurciis saeculi, quam orationibus sanctis saeculi parturierant contemptores. [18.] Quod cum contuitus fuisse Paphnutius, exclamans uoce magna, cecidit in terram quasi exanimatus. Ad cuius clamorem excitatus Agapitus institutor Euphrosinae cum cellam fuisse ingressus, defunctam illam et Paphnutium quasi exanimem iacentem consiperet. Aquam algentem in faciem proiecit Paphnutii. Qui, ad tactum aquae in sese rediens, uoces ingentes ad sidera ploratus et eiulatus iactare nul lamque secretis filiae fidem seruans, uniuersa cum clamore et ululatu coepit in lucem dare, uociferans et dicens: «Heu heu, filia mea! traxit? Vbinam sum, infelix? Vbinam est Paphnutius pater, Agapite? Putas somnium fuit? An reuera uox fuit filiae quae paulo ante meas perculit aures? Vbinam ergo tanta fugacitate delituit?» Et haec dicens proiecit se super cadauer Euphrosinae, heiulans et exclamans: «O filia mea! O lux, o uita! O omne bonum meum! Heu me miserum, uel per triduum uel per biduum uel per diem saltim integrum ista intimauisses. Ecce, pater Agapite, ecce filia, ecce Euphrosina, ecce fructus orationum uestrarum, ecce luctum meum, me miserum, ecce planctum meum, ecce inconsolabilem ululatum Paphnutii. Vae uae, Paphnuti, infelicissime cunctorum mortalium, quid acturus es? Vae uae, quid agis? Quo te uertes, miserrime? Taces, Euphrosina, taces. Me miserum! Vita mea morior, uere morior. Non est mihi ultra uiuendi facultas. Ego te mortua ultra uiuere potero, Euphrosina? Euphrosina mortua est et Paphnutius ultra uiuet? Quis me solabitur? Cum omne bonum meum deseruerit me, numquam ad me ulterius reuersurum? O crudelis, o pes-sima, o omni humanitate deserta! O saxeum pectus, o animum adamantineum! Per triginta et octo annos posse pati patrem angustiari, conteri, tribulari, cum uno omnes posset uerbo eius perturbationes sedare? Heu me, quid agam, filia unigenita? Filia de dilecta nimis mihi sterilique uxore suscepta, filia sanctorum mihi a Domino orationibus impetrata, filia filiarum omnium hominum formosissima, filia feminarum omnium prudentissima. Filia mi, quid taces? Filia mi, ubi mel, ubi fauus eloquiorum tuorum, filia mi? Quis mihi det ut et ipse non ultra loqui ualeam, filia mi? Quis mihi det ut hic protinus moriar, filia mi? Quis mihi det ut humo tecum obruat, filia mi?».

[19.] Ad clamores et eiulatus huiusmodi fratum illuc omnium confluit multitudo. Ipse etiam sanctus abbas, intimata ei morte Euphrosinae Paphnutiique fletu, maturus aduenit. Quibus uehementer obnixeque instantibus ut lacrimis et uociferationibus parceret, resumptaque mente, quaenam esset tanti ploratus causa euidentius aperiret, uix aliquando eorum potuit cohortationibus adquiescere in seque tandem rediens hos sermones effudit: «Quid per me uultis, patres sanctissimi, uobis lucidius declarari? Haec est infelicitis Paphnutii filia Euphrosina. Haec, eunuchum simulans, ad nos uenit et per tot ecce tempora in hac cella uiuentes latuit uniuersos». Et singultiens uocemque ferens altius, «Si fortassis», inquit, «non creditis uerbis meis, exuite eam, detegite, praebete fidem saltim oculis uestris».

Quid plura? Parata aqua, cadauer exuitur abluendum de more. Non fuit ultra cuilibet de uerbis Paphnutii ambigendum, cum iam nudata ueritas ipsis oculis certum sui praeberet indubiumque indicium. Quantus autem tunc stupor quantaque mentis hebetudo corripuerit uniuersos, quae fuerit prae immensitate stuporis et gaudii inundatio lacrimarum in oculis cunctorum astantium, melius silentio nostro cogitandum lectori, considerandumque relinquimus. Quam rem quam digne scimus per nos explicari non posse, uerbis prosequi quibuslibet laboremus. Abbas autem ipse, super sanctum cadauer se iaciens, eiusque manus pedesque deosculans, clamabat dicens: «Euphrosina, sanctorum filia, Euphrosina, huius a Deo congregationis precibus impetrata, ne obliuiscaris confratrum et conseruorum tuorum, virgo sanctissima, oraque inde sinenter pro nobis ad sponsum tuum, agna Dei sponsaque praeelecta filii Dei, ut, te interuentrice, deuicto hoste, tuis tandem mereamur gaudiis admirisci». In haec uerba interuentum Euphrosinae apud Deum omnis quoque congregatio inuocabat.

[20.] Quantum autem Deo conuersatio Euphrosinae accepta extiterit, hora eadem magni est ostensione miraculi declaratum. Frater namque quidam, peste qua nescio inualescente languoris, lumen unius oculorum amiserat. Qui, cum sancto cadaueri osculum impressisset, lumen sibi diuinitus sensit continuo restitutum.

[21.] Mandato autem terrae cum mirae deuotionis exequis sancto cadauere, domum Paphnutius est reuersus suaque omnia per ecclesias pauperesque distribuens. Partem maximam sancto conferens monasterio, cellam in qua filia fuerat commorata ingressus est. Ibique mira corpus macerans abstinentia atque in psiathio semper Euphrosinae dormiens, octo in sancta religione decursis annorum curriculis, migravit ad Dominum, cui est honor et gloria in saecula saeculorum. Amen.
